to Belle Fourche and Newell Schools

Alyssa Frisbie news@bellefourchebeacon.com

As February is Heart Healthy Month, both Newell and Belle Fourche high schools brought awareness to COPD at basketball games through multiple events hosted at Newell High School on February 12, and Belle Fourche High School on February 16.

COPD stands for chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and includes both emphysema and chronic bronchitis, as it refers to a group of diseases that cause airflow blockage and breathing-related problems.

This awareness was brought to students and community member of both schools by Sandra DeYoe and the Action of the Betterment of our Community of Butte County (ABC). Sandra, and her late husband, Tom DeYoe, were both graduates of Belle Fourche High School, and together they owned a parts and hardware store in Newell and Sandra also ran the Blue Line Café.

After Tom's death on December 23, 2022, from complications of COPD, Sandra decided to do something to educate the youth and community members about the dangers of smoking. Tom had smoked for most of his life; he started smoking while

Council Approves 2023 Roundup Parade Route

BELLE FOURCHE – The route for the 2023 Black Hills Roundup Parade will remain unchanged from last year. The city council gave its unanimous approval for the parade route but not without a little discussion.

Ward 3 Council member Clark Sowers expressed his support to approve the route as presented but with a suggestion that the council, Public Works, and the Roundup Parade Committee have a discussion on the future of the parade route after this year.

"I'm going to vote for the resolution to approve the parade route and I'd like to encourage the council to so as well," Sowers said. "But I think after our meeting last week with Public Works that there's a lot that we need to discuss."

Sowers said some of the concerns that were brought forward included highway safety, the rodeo contestants' access to the rodeo grounds and the need for volunteers.

"And we're also trying to support our downtown businesses," he said.

For several years the parade route went through the heart of downtown on State Street. But during the two-and-half-years of the Eight Avenue Sewer Interceptor project the parade route was changed and has not passed through downtown for several years. Shop owners along that stretch have since lobbied the council and the Roundup committee to reestablish the route through downtown, seeing it as an opportunity to increase retail business and ultimately tax revenue to the city.

The issue with the downtown route has been the need to close part of US Highway 85 as the parade turned the corner toward the south at the intersection with State Street. The police and sheriff's department see this as a safety issue with added vehicle and pedestrian congestion on a federal highway and has struggled with the added expense of hiring extra officers to help with traffic flow.

The parade is a signature event for the community and attracts tens of thousands of visitors to Belle Fourche during the July 4th holiday. Trying to reach a compromise on the issue has proved to be a challenge in the past.

"But I think it's important that maybe after the Roundup this year that we get together as a council and have a good discussion on that," Sowers said.

Once again, the parade will lineup along 13th Ave. from Ziebach Street to National Street where the parade will begin. It will proceed east on National and turn north onto Elkhorn Street, onto 10th Ave, turning left on State, then south at 8th Ave. ending at National St.

The parade is scheduled for July 4 at 10:30am. There is a parade map on B5

Milestones at Annual Gala

Belle Fourche delivers an emotional address to thank supporters for helping the SDKB and the Stronger Families Together initiative reach its year-one goal of adding 300 new foster parents statewide. news@bellefourchebeacon.com SPEARFISH – South Dakota Kids Belong (SDKB), directed by Belle Fourche couple Damen and Kristi Woolsey, celebrated milestone achievements during their 2023 fundraising gala held on Friday, Feb. 24, at Countryside Church in Spearfish.

Nearly 300 supporters gathered for the event called "Rise Up for South Dakota Children" to hear inspirational presentations and video addresses from Gov. Kristi Noem and keynote speaker Mandy Litzke, Director of Safe Harbor Orphan Care of Ohio. The event drew attendees from Belle Fourche, Spearfish, Whitewood, Lead-Deadwood, Newell, Sturgis, and other surrounding communities. Since its formation in 2018 the organization has grown to now have separate gala events from this area and another for Rapid City. What started in Belle Fourche now has a statewide reach with support programs in Sioux Falls and Pierre.

In 2021 SDKB entered a partnership with Gov. Noem and the State Department of Social Services to form the Stronger Families Together initiative. The goal was to recruit 300 new foster families in South Dakota during its first year, ending in August of 2022. During the gala last week attendees learned that SFT not only met that goal but exceeded it. The realization of the goal represents a record single year recruitment for the state of South Dakota.

"That is fantastic news and it's all because of your hard work," Gov. Noem told the crowd. "But we can't stop. Our work is not done as there are still kids who need a loving home. So thank you for everything you have done. I'm confident that together we will be able to change lives and give more South Dakota children the home that they deserve."

"It was truly an amazing year," Damen Woolsey, SDKB Ex. Dir., told the Beacon.
"Meeting that goal was huge and then activating more than 100 businesses and getting over 30 churches involved made a huge impact in communities from those who said, 'we're not going to let these kids go without enough foster and adoptive families.' It was just a really good year to see it all working. We have truly remarkable volunteers and dedicated staff that

Amended Transient Merchant Ordinance To Take Effect

BELLE FOURCHE – The amended ordinance regulating transient (or visiting) merchants to the city passed its second reading at city council on Feb. 6 and will go into effect early next month. The ordinance is scheduled for publication on Feb. 14 and will take affect 20 days later, on Mar. 6.

The ordinance passed its second reading without public comment and the council vote was unanimous. The goal of the ordinance was to make the city more welcoming of approved transient vendors thus increasing retail business and adding to the tax base. Some have characterized it as making the city more "food truck friendly."

Overall, the ordinance modifies exemptions, eliminates special events by creating approved events, shifts the purchase of permits and bonds from the police department to the city finance office, sets hours of operation, spells out approved public property locations, and extends the duration of the license from 30-days to a calendar year. Fees will be established by resolution of the city council.

The amended ordinance does not apply to nonprofit organizations, traveling salespersons doing business exclusively to retail merchants, garage sales or children's lemonade stands. It also does not apply to those who sell their own products at farmers' markets and crafts shows as long as they do not own a retail business that sells these products.

A modification of the ordinance states that it does not apply if the transient merchant is doing temporary business at a fixed location after having received permission from an approved event (formerly characterized as a special event).

amended ordinance:

he was in high school. According to Sandra, "When it gets bad, it gets really bad," as she went into further detail about how it got to the point where Tom could not even walk across the room. Furthermore, Sandra also talked about how Tom could no longer do the activities he loved because COPD "truly steals your life."

Because smoking is so hard to quit and there are many resources out there to help,

Sandra and her daughter Tracy came to both games with story boards and informational pamphlets.

Fun prizes were awarded to community members who answered questions about the dangers of tobacco and vaping.

At half time of the basketball games, the youth leadership teams of both schools encouraged students, parents, and community members to join in a dance and have fun by being active, with the message that February is Heart Healthy month and to be tobacco free and stay active.

The student leadership team of Newell and Belle Fourche High School's Youth Leadership Team would like to thank Sandra DeYoe for her contributions to their schools to promote awareness of the dangers of smoking, and for organizing a fun event to bring education to both communities in Butte County.

Pastor's Perspective

This week's P P is provided by: Pastor Chuck Aurand Belle Fourche UCC & St. Onge UCC

"Create in me a clean heart, O God, and put a new and right spirit within me." [Psalm 51:10 NRSV]

This psalm has long been associated with the beginning of the season of Lent. It is a period of forty days (not counting Sundays) leading to and preparing for the Easter celebration. But the larger question is "Why Lent?"

I remember as a youngster climbing into the back of an Olds station wagon with my brother. The seat was set so that we looked out the back of the car, while my three sisters in the middle bench seat, looked forward. Back in the early 60's, I didn't do much packing for Summer trips. I grabbed a single toy from my room and scampered in the car. My mother packed our suitcases and ensured that all was ready for the trip.

I wasn't aware of it at the time, but my parents carefully planned all our trips, including snacks and where we would stop for meals (usually brought with us), and where we would sleep for the night. Everything carefully planned and mapped out.

Our journey through life is an important trip that all of us take. The vehicle of choice really doesn't matter. It could be as eHummer or a busted '66 Ford that barely runs, regardless of your possessions in this life, you will be born and you will die. What is important is where you are headed. That's where Lent comes in. Lent is an annual season to take stock of where you are now in your relationship with God, and where you want that relationship to be when you die. Lent is the time to ask God to place a "new and right spirit" within you.

Psalm 51, tradition tells us, was written to commemorate King David's sorrow for sins in his life after being confronted by the prophet Nathan. David was crushed that he could sin so easily and boldly. David knew that God was displeased—and indeed his baby died as a sign of God's displeasure. David's spirit was "crushed", so he did the "Lent" thing. He honestly looked at where he was in his relationship with God. He saw where he wanted to go...and he tried his best to walk once more with his Lord. He is counted as Israel's greatest king because he didn't give up. He wasn't perfect. He was far from that! But King David kept working on his relationship with Remember those football players in the Super Bowl. They got there because they didn't give up either. After each play, they dusted themselves off and tried again and again, until they crossed the goal line. This is what Lent is. We sin. We fall down. We aren't where we want to be. So we dust ourselves off, and

Broncs Girls Basketball Regional Action

JIM TRIMBLE news@bellefourchebeacon.com

The Belle Fourche Broncs girls basketball team opened the region 8 class A basketball tournament on Thursday February 14 as the Lady

Broncs hosted the Hot Springs Lady Bison. The Broncs come into the tournament as a three seed with a 13-6 record while the Bison are 9-11 and the sixth

The Broncs started out hot as senior Chloe Crago hit a banker from the side that she followed by a hard drive to the basket and a layup by Mataya Ward and the Broncs led 6-2. Both teams hit a drought in the middle of the first quarter but a Grace Clooten's inside bucket followed by a Dylan Stedille three and Reese Larson's jumper from the elbow and the Broncs blew out to a 16-4 lead at the end of one.

Hot Springs hit a basket and a three, but Crago scored from deep and Ward hit on an assist from Lily McCarty to make it 21-9. Belle then went on a 7-0 run fueled by a McCarty breakaway layup and jumpers by Crago and Clooten and the Broncs were cruising 28-9 at halftime.

The Broncs didn't let down to begin the third period. Crago nailed another Belle layup and Ward cleared an offensive board for a put back hoop and the Broncs were up 32-9. After the Bison hit four straight points Ward was on the boards again with an offensive rebound hoop and Crago repeated yet another steal and basket. Clooten and Crago both netted shots inside before Lily Nore scored in the paint followed by a Stedille steal and hoop and the Broncs were rolling 44-19 after three.

The Broncs played 4 deep into the bench in the fourth quarter as Clooten dropped in two more baskets in the lane and Larson hit a long three as Belle finished the game with a 51-26 victory.

Chloe Crago led the Broncs attack with numerous steals and 18 points. Mataya Ward and Grace Clooten chipped in 8 points each. "We played good defense and were patient on offense," commented coach Bill Burr. "It was a nice win for our five seniors with a last win at home," he added.

The Broncs tangled with second seeded Rapid City Christian Comets on Saturday with the winner heading to the SoDak 16 and a chance to play in the State A Basketball Tournament. The Broncs handed the Comets a loss last year to advance but this year the Comets held the upper hand and home court advantage and defeated the Broncs 66-49.

The Lady Comets employed a full court trap defense for nearly the whole game, which gave the Broncs some issues getting the ball efficiently in the front court. Christian held the lead 17-9 after one quarter and pushed the lead to 34-20 going to the locker room at half. Belle played Christian fairly even in the second half but exceptional free throw shooting by the Comets proved the difference as they hit 27-34 from the charity stripe for the game, 16 of which came in the second half. Belle actually made two more field goals than the Comets in the contest. The Broncs were 8-14 from the line.

Ward paced the Broncs in scoring as she tallied 14 points, while Clooten and Larson added 8 and 7 points respectively. Olivia Kieffer poured in 27 for the Comets while Alexa Ham added 22 including 15-16 on free tosses. "The pressure definitely got to us but the amount of fouls we had hurt more. We just probably played over aggressive and that got us in foul trouble," said coach Burr.

The Broncs committed 27 fouls and had three ladies foul out of the game. "We had a good season ending 14-7 and will miss our 5 seniors, but will have a good crew coming back next year so I'm excited for that," Burr added. Broncs playing their last game for the purple and white were Lily Mc-Carty, Tia Williamson, Chloe Crago, Dylan Stedille, and Grace Clooten.

Interstate 90 Exit 37 Reconstruction Project Continues

STURGIS, S.D. – The South Dakota Department of Transportation (SDDOT) says the third phase of a four-phase project to reconstruct the exit 37 interchange on Interstate 90, near Sturgis, will begin Monday, Feb. 27, 2023. The project includes the reconstruction of the exit 37 interchange, eastbound grading and paving on I-90 from west of exit 37 to the Tilford port of entry, drainage structure extensions, installation of pipe culverts, installation of a commercial vehicle electronic screening system, and the construction of a new port of entry building. Beginning Friday, March 3, 2023, nighttime closures of I-90 will occur at exit 37 between the hours of 9 p.m. and 6 a.m. for the installation of the new bridge girders and decking. These closures are anticipated to last through the month of March. Traffic will be routed around the closure via the exit 37 ramps.

Beginning Wednesday, March 1, 2023, traffic will be limited to the driving lane in each direction near exit 37 as the passing lanes will be closed for work in the median. Work in the median will include construction of temporary exit ramp crossovers at exit 37. Traffic will also be limited to the passing lane in each direction between the railroad underpass and exit 40 as the westbound on-ramp and eastbound offramp are reconstructed and the railroad multiplate is extended. Both exit ramps will be closed on Wednesday, March, 1, 2023, with a detour in place utilizing exit 44. In the beginning of April, traffic will be placed in a two-way configuration in the westbound lanes between exit 34 and exit 44 as reconstruction work in the eastbound lanes commences.

Phase one of the project included the construction of a center bent for the new bridge at exit 37 and grading of the new exit 37 westbound off-ramp and eastbound on-ramp and offramp. Phase two included work in the westbound lanes and median of I-90 to replace drainage culverts, extend box culverts, begin the installation of the commercial vehicle screening system, construction of the exit 37 westbound on-ramp and off-ramp, continue with the construction of the new exit 37 overpass bridge (Pleasant Valley Road), and demolition of the existing port of entry building and beginning construction of the new port of entry building. Phase three is anticipated to be complete by the end of July 2023. Phase four work and final cleanup will occur after the 2023 Sturgis Motorcycle Rally beginning on Monday, Aug. 14, 2023. Phase four work includes grading on Pleasant Valley Road at exit 37, removal of the old bridge at exit 37, and removal of median crossovers.

The prime contractor on the $35 million project is Complete Concrete, Inc. of Rapid City. The project is scheduled for completion by Friday, Oct. 27, 2023.

For the Sheer Love of Shearing Day

For the Bar 69 Ranch, just East of Belle Fourche shearing day is one of the last steps before the lambing season begins. Craig and Deb Kukuchka and their family set aside the entire day for the shearing. Chase (son), Ashton (daughter-in-law) Callie (daughter), Dillion (sonin-law), and their three granddaughters Ellie, Cora, and Ivy all work the day. Cora and Ivy being the younger ones come with their mom to see how dad grandma and grandpa are doing. They watch their big sister do what dad taught her and what his parents taught him.

The day is very organized. Deb calls Mooney Shearing way in advance to schedule the day. "I call in December. Other people might not do that. But I do"! Other preparations start about a week before.

5 shearers 2 fleece throwers, 1 bagger, and 2 skirting, sweepers Ellie, Bailey, Lexi, and Izzy.

Chase, Trevor, and Teagen moved the sheep up the ramp into the trailer from the barn, where the sheep spent the night to keep the sheep dry. The wool needs to be dry when shearing or it will take a lot longer to daughter) likes it too. I started her sweeping, and then I moved her to the tables. She was actually on the wool judging team in college". Deb is a team leader in a local Butte County 4-H club. A lot of the helpers this weekend were either current 4-H members or grew up in 4-H. "Bailey is a 4-H'r, everybody here was in 4-H, Trevor, Teagan is a 4-H'r, all my family are former 4-H members, both Baileys' are in 4-H, Izzy's a 4-H member, Cora is a future 4-H'r". Cora is one of three granddaughters of Craig and Deb.

What's your favorite part? "I like wool, I like handling

Craig and Deb are blessed to have both their son Chase, and daughter Callie to live on the ranch with their spouses and children. Chase and Ashton have three daughters who love to raise their sheep, and goats, and love to ride their ponies.

Deb and Craig married in 1984 and Deb taught school in Judith Gap, Montana where she and Craig came to know families that raised sheep. Craig and Deb visited a few of these family ranches and decided to get into the sheep business. They moved to Belle Fourche in 1988. Raising sheep at the "Ruby Place" works really well because Craig and Deb can run 1/3 more livestock on their grass because sheep graze differently than cattle. "They eat different things than the cows, so it ups our carrying capacity." You can easily find the Bar 69 Ranch east of Belle Fourche going towards Orman Lake. They also raise performance-tested Angus and their yearly bull sale is Thursday, April 6, 2023, 12 PM, at Belle Fourche Livestock. Like most ranchers in the area lambing and calving season will be in full force soon, so there is no rest or hibernating in the winter. Ranching is a 25/8 job and somehow they find extra time to get it all done.

One way Deb and Craig find more time to get it all done is by finding great partners and people who love their way of life as much as they do. Curtis Mooney, owner of Mooney Shearing is such a partner. He has been around sheep his whole life. Before Curtis owned Mooney Shearing his dad owned it, Matt Mooney. Originally from Australia, Matt came to the USA and was part of an exchange program for two springs, classing wool for Center of the Nation Wool. He came back as a shearer and put down roots in Belle Fourche. "Allen Youngberg from Newell (who was a world sheep shearing champion) started the crew and then Matt bought it. We first used them in 1989 when Allen owned the business. We used to shear up north. I suppose it was about 2002 or so

business to Michael Hagens and this past fall Curtis brought it back to the Mooney family and bought it from Hagens. He has two trailers and subcontracts the shearers and wool help. They shear Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota, Colorado, and of course South Dakota. "It is a very busy time of year", said Jacobie Mooney, Curtis's wife. Jacobie travels with Curtis and her father-in-law Matt and keeps things moving smoothly. Matt taught his son well. Curtis's personal sheep shearing record is 407 sheep in one day! If you are needing the services of Mooney Shearing contact Curtis at 308-207-5404. While the sheep shearers are shearing the sheep, the fleece throwers keep their trailer space clear. Jacobie takes on the task of a fleece thrower. She removes debris, and small clumps of wool and separate it into three different bags; belly wool (sheared first), short wool, and coarse wool. Once the sheep are fully sheared the fleece throwers artfully gather the fleece with the clean side (closest to the sheep skin) up. With it folded in like an accordion, snug to their body, and tightly gripped with fingers as clothespins, they throw the fleece onto the skirting tables.

They throw the fleece as if they were throwing a clean sheet on a bed, only their thumbs and index fingers holding on. Miraculously, for a newbie like myself, the dirty side is revealed and the skirting crew begins their job. The skirting table is a large wheel with spokes like a bicycle that moves freely and easily for the workers. With 550 sheep fleeces shorn and thrown, the wheel movement makes it easy for the skirters to turn the wheel and process the wool fleece quickly. Smaller pieces fall through the wheel and that is where the sweepers start their job. Sweepers are the youngsters in the family.

It's the first job they are given, during shearing, and with more experience, they can become skirters and fleece throwers. They sweep debris and clumps of wool together from the large tarps laid down and throw it in either the short wool or course wool bags. On this day four sweepers, Ellie, Bailey, Lexi, and Izzy helped keep the area clean. The sweepers also jump into the loose wool bags and stomp down the wool. During the sheep shearer's breaks Ellie, Lexi, and Izzy would run around the barns, crawl over fences, play tag, pet the goats, horses, and cats, and build forts. All along the adults watched and yearned to have the energy of their youthful days.

Once the fleece skirter has examined the fleece they would turn the skirting wheel and wrap, or fold the fleece and carry it to the bagger. The bagger is the person who operates the wool compressor. The bagger stuffs the bag with fleece skirts and then compresses it. Once the bag is full the bag is closed, marked, and placed on a flatbed trailer.

After all the bags are full, marked, and placed on a flatbed the wool is hauled to Center of the Nation Wool in Belle Fourche. Most of the wool is exported and used for military clothing and wool socks.

"We will take it to 'Center of the Nation Wool' where it will go for export. The fine grade wool will go for Military uniforms, or fine wool socks", Deb Kukuchka.

The Good Stuff

by Jim Thompson

Family Friendly & Great Food for all!

Jim Thompson takes motivational stories that listeners and readers send him and incorporates them into the program. It has been on the air for more than 10 years.

When I first came to winter in Arizona I didn't own a pair of shorts nor even a short sleeved shirt. I had been at rodeos each weekend during the summer and had gotten used to the heat. I eventually realized that I'd need those for golf. And I realized that golfing in boots was not a good idea as I got older. But folks I'll tell you this...I don't wear crocs. I'm not sure who gets the credit for this, but it's a good one:

Cowboys Don't Wear Crocs

Although there be some debatin'
'Bout if ol' cowboys wear socks—
I can tell you fer a dern fact,
That true cowboys don't wear Crocs.

They just don't fit a stirrup right, And bright colors scare the stock— I'll sure nuff shoot the first cowboy I see wearin' a new Croc! Oh, we talk of Old West legends Like our Jesses' and Hickoks— But I hope I never do see Cowboys herdin' in their Crocs!

And when that great cattle Master Lays me low beneath the rocks— Just make sure I'm wearin' my boots And not a pair of them Crocs!

Bareback Rider R.C. Landingham Captures Win in Jackson

In the iconic Western film "3:10 to Yuma," a train plays a central role in the plot.

R.C. Landingham enjoyed a resolve movie script Saturday night, catching 310 to Yuma in his draw and riding him to victory at 310 to Yuma in his draw and riding him to victory at the Dixie National Rodeo in Jackson, Miss.

Landingham posted an 87.5-point score on the Brook-man Rodeo stock, scooting past multiple competitors by a half point in the bareback riding event at the Playoff Series rodeo.

Rodeo life requires becoming comfortable when uncomfortable. Plans become suggestions. But Landingham followed his to-do list perfectly to produce the impressive score.

"I am kind of learning in my old age that if you plan right, good things can happen," he said with a laugh. "I flew into Texas. I picked up my truck that I left at a buddy's house. I got to Jackson today, and I knew I had a good chance."

Video told Landingham as much. The Hat Creek, Calif., native studied the horse before arriving at the rodeo. The preparation created separation for Landingham, who, after a three-year absence because of myriad of injuries, has qualified for the Wrangler National Finals Rodeo in back-to-back seasons.

"That's a really good horse. He's solid. He does the same things every time, and I had a good idea of what he would do before I got here," Landingham said. "He has some big moves. And it was really nice how he got out of the chute. I knew he was going to give me a good chance to place or win. He definitely let me show off a little bit."

Landingham earned $5,006 for his eight-second performance.

For Landingham, these moments never get old. At age

32, he realizes the fickle nature of the sport and health. But after the last two seasons, his resolve has grown along with his appreciation.

Kase Hitt Snares Okeechobee Division 1 Xtreme Bulls Win

Kase Hitt knows bulls. His family – uncle H.D., grandfather Dillon and mother Shawna – has been raising them for years, stock so special that they have been used in the Wrangler National Finals Rodeo. Being around them is one thing. Riding them is a different story.

However, inspired by his uncle, Hitt never hesitated to jump on the back of the burly beasts as a young kid.

Only 18, Hitt is starting to gain traction in his career. The Oklahoma native posted an impressive victory at the Brighton Field Days Festival Xtreme Bulls on Sunday, scoring 87.5 points to eclipse the field.

"It was amazing environment," said Hitt of the Okeechobee, Fla., event. "The fans were perfect. The rodeo arena was perfect. It was just a great experience."

Hitt knew he had a chance to score well after getting intel on the bull, Painted Pony Championship Rodeo's No. 573. He

Legendary ProRodeo Photographer Jim Svoboda Passes Away

Jim Svoboda, a legendary ProRodeo photographer for 66 years, passed away on Feb. 19. He was 88.

"He told me last week he was going out happy and wanted us to be happy," said son Von, one of Svoboda's three children.

Svoboda graduated in 1956 from the University of Nebraska at Lincoln. He worked 33 years for the USDA as County Executive Officer for the Agriculture Stabilization Conservation Service serving Garfield, Loup, and Wheeler Counties until he retired in 1989. He also owned a ranch with his wife and family north of Burwell, Neb., prior to his retirement, where they owned a registered Hereford operation.

The sport of rodeo, however, was his passion.

Svoboda spent nearly 20 years as a successful four event all-around rodeo competitor, competing in steer wrestling, saddle bronc riding, bareback riding, and bull riding. His best streak was 54 bareback rides in a row. He filled his PRCA permit in 1958 and received his PRCA Gold card in 1984.

A severely broken leg forced Svoboda to become a full-time rodeo photographer.

With more than three million photos shot and nearly 40 cameras worn out Syoboda was a true legend in the rodeo photography industry. He was recognized as the 2008 PRCA Photographer of the Year. Svoboda retired at his hometown rodeo in Burwell, Neb., in 2021. He first attended Nebraska's Big Rodeo in Burwell in 1946.

'The one thing about dad is that he was very meticulous on the record keeping aspect of it (his photos)," Von said. "If anybody would say 'Do you have a picture back at Pendleton in whatever year,' dad would go back and say 'Yep, I have that.' He had a system where he kept track of each of the individual cowboys and to this day if someone would call him, he would have an envelope of all their proofs of everything he took. I don't know if there is a rodeo he didn't photograph. He went from the northwest to the First Frontier Circuit in New Jersey down to Florida.'

Svoboda had this to say when asked how he decided where to put himself to take the best rodeo shots in an article written by Anne Christensen in the Oct. 24, 2008, issue of the ProRodeo Sports News.

"I try to figure out the angle from each chute and where they will end up, then get out in front of the action and not just shoot > the bucking horses' rear end," Svoboda said. "The most dangerous event to photograph is saddle bronc riding. One time I was standing on the fence, and my feet were at least six feet off the ground.

That bronc kicked and got me right between the shoulder blades. Now I stay out of everyone's way, I darn sure don't want to mess up somebody's run. I'm getting older. I figure out the best place to get run over - and I stand somewhere else. If you're on the inside, you might be running while you should be taking the picture, so sometimes I stand outside the fence, and I keep my stuff back. First-timers will use their tripods right next to the fence; here comes a guy swinging his loop and he catches the lights or camera.

"Rodeo is the toughest photography there is. The worst thing is dust – I always tell the committees that the audience doesn't like it either. No one wants a gritty hot dog."

"My family is certainly blessed," said Marilyn, Jim's wife of 64 years. "Rodeo was one of his loves. Jim was the epitome of the dedication, commitment, and very hard work."

Svoboda's decorated resume

also included the following:

- He co-published the book, 50 Years of Nebraska's Big Rodeo (first 50 years of the Burwell PRCA rodeo)
- He was "Official Photographer" for: Miss Rodeo America Pageant, 100 various PRCA Circuit Finals, National Intercollegiate Finals, NFR Bronc/ Bull Sale, Bill Pickett National Finals, 25 years National Little Britches Rodeo Finals
- Grand Marshall Nebraska's Big Rodeo

"I would want people to remember my dad as probably the most positive person. He would always have a smile on his face," Von said. "He never had a bad day. The other thing is that he had a real friendship with other photographers. He was always willing to share ideas. For instance, Alaina Stangle, she was an NFR photographer a couple of years ago. He mentored her and when dad retired, he gave her one of his lenses. He just had an affinity for friendship for the other photographers.

"When he got his leg broke really bad that ruined his ability to compete. That's when he really hit the road and started doing photos. He was part of a family of 11 children and dad and all his brothers rodeoed. There was a little outdoor arena they built in Burwell, and they all got the rodeo bug. They were just poor farm kids and all they wanted to be cowboys. They wanted to ride bucking Svoboda was preceded in death by his parents James, Sr., and Margaret (Walkowiak) Svoboda, one brother and three sisters. Svoboda is survived by his wife Marilyn, three children, Tana Brinkman (Jim), Jason Von Svoboda (Angela), JonBen Svoboda (AnneMarie), seven grandchildren and three great grandchildren, two brothers and four sisters.

At Svoboda's request, he wanted a private graveside service and in lieu of flowers send remembrance memorials to the family which will be collectively donated in his honor to the Nebraska's Big Rodeo in Burwell.

News & Notes From The Rodeo Trail

Korkow Rodeo's Queenie, an 11-time National Finals Rodeo horse – nine in saddle bronc riding and two in bareback riding - passed away Jan. 30. "She was never bronc of the year or anything, but she by far was one of our most popular horses," Brie Korkow of Korkow Rodeo said. Queenie appeared as an NFR bareback horse in 2000 as a 4-year-old, then again in 2001. She then switched to saddle bronc riding and appeared at the NFR in that event in 2002-

2009, and 2011.

Queenie placed second twice in bareback riding and led cowboys to the pay window four times in saddle bronc riding, highlighted by Cody DeMoss winning Round 7 on her in 2004.

"She was so photogenic, she was a beautiful paint," Korkow said. "You could pet on her and love on her. She was a classy horse. Even if you didn't do your job, she made it to where it still looked good. She just had this quality about her to make cowboys look flashy."

Givin' It Up

We have had some interesting weather. Some seem to think Mother Nature has been off her meds! Seems normal to me, looking back at past things I have written down and saved.

Many are calving and fighting the cold and enjoying the warmer temps. As I write this we have a cold south east wind blowing. It doesn't matter which way the wind comes from, it is always cold out of the south east!

Lent is here. It is supposedly 40 days of fasting almsgiving, and prayer to better reunite Christians with the Lord. I always give up some bad habits. One of them is cussing. It is a terrible habit and usually by Easter I have got it under control. Tho' I seem to slowly go back to it as the year passes. Seems like I could get over it and just quit, but I am a weak willed person evidently. Sure makes it harder for me when things don't go as planned! And I am one of those people who likes to burn my bridges before I get to them!

Also, in the world news is all the fuss over east, or perhaps west, depending on which way your looking, with the Ukraine and Russia. I have been watching lots of first person videos on the computer with arguments on both sides as to what is going on. I do know I will never ever trust the main stream media again, after all the propaganda they have been putting out for years. It gets worse every year!

I find it interesting all the speculation as to the why's and what is really going on. Like many things, we probably will never get the 100% real story. I do think we need to keep our nose out of it. And I think the present leaders of this country have a lot of nerve for suggesting that we get involved. Heck, we had tyranny just across the border to the north and nobody suggested we go in and help those who were being mistreated. You got to admit, it would be cheaper. Why we could just cross the northern border. Heck, we could take care of it in a couple days and be back for supper!

And now you know why I am not in politics! Watch the weather and be prepared. Enjoy the good with the bad and I will see you next week.

From A1 Xtreme Bulls

saw the bull Saturday when a friend rode him, and 'knew he would be good.' The bull played to Hitt's strengths, resulting in a $11,210 first-place check, besting Clayton Sellars (85.5 points, $8,594) and Cody McElroy (85 points, $6,352).

"He turned back into my hand, and I really like when a bull turns back into my hand like that. My timing was good. I rode the front side well," Hitt said. "And I was able to get to the end."

Hitt is finding his way in the sport he loves. He arrived in Okeechobee after appearances at the 150th Silver Spurs Rodeo in Kissimmee, Fla., and the Dixie National Rodeo in Jackson, Miss, trying to maximize nearby competitions. He has taken to the rodeo lifestyle, and the flooding rush of adrenaline.

"Just that feeling when you ride one. There's nothing like it," said Hitt, whose busy schedule takes him to Nebraska this week. "It's hard to explain. The crowd is screaming, and it all happens so fast. There's just no feeling like it."

Although young, Hitt's goals remain big. He has attended the NFR multiple times with his family's stock. He has naturally let his mind wander about competing on rodeo's biggest stage.

"Yes sir," Hitt said. "Being there with my family, it's always been my dream to come out of those chutes."

Travel South Dakota's Tourism Campaign Wins Award

PIERRE, S.D. – Travel South Dakota's Go Great Places integrated marketing campaign was recently honored with a platinum Adrian Award – being elevated after an additional round of judging of 2022 gold award winning entries.

In November, it was announced that Travel South Dakota was honored with three Adrian Awards, which are international marketing awards from the Hospitality Sales and Marketing Association International (HSMAI).

After the Go Great Places integrated campaign was designated a gold award winner, a second round of judging deemed it a platinum award winner out of more than 600 entries. Being elevated to a platinum award made it eligible for the Best in Show award.

The annual Adrian Awards are the world's most prestigious travel marketing awards, recognizing travel marketing organizations for innovative sales & marketing efforts in advertising, public relations, and digital marketing. The awards ceremony honoring the handful of platinum award winners was held on Thurs., Feb. 23, in Los Angeles, California.

Travel South Dakota's Go Great Places integrated campaign was developed in partnership with Lawrence & Schiller of Sioux Falls, MMGY Global of Kansas City, Missouri, and Miles Partnership of Denver, Colorado.

The goal of the Go Great Places campaign was to stay top of mind with travelers and reach people who were ready to safely travel again. The campaign focused on South Dakota's wide-open spaces and outdoor attractions.

Overall, this campaign led to 13.5 million visitors in 2021, garnered more than 4 million impressions, and saw a return on investment of $52:$1.

"It is our department's mission to create top-notch marketing campaigns that are not only effective, but also engaging," said James Hagen, Secretary of the Department of Tourism. "Having this award moved to the platinum category and be eligible for Best of Show amongst hundreds of other top notch tourism marketing competitors motivates our team to keep pursuing opportunities to share South Dakota's story with visitors from across the world."

The South Dakota Department of Tourism is comprised of Travel South Dakota and the South Dakota Arts Council. The Department is led by Secretary James D. Hagen.

BHSU to Host Annual Scrubs Camp

Black Hills State University is set to host "Scrubs Camp" March 17.

Scrubs Camp is an event sponsored by the South Dakota Department of Health and the Office of Rural Health. The camp is held all throughout the state of South Dakota and is designed to help high school students explore healthcare careers while gaining handson experience. Admittance to Scrubs Camp is free of charge and food is also provided to students. This will be the 14th year that BHSU has hosted a Scrub Camp session.

This year's healthcare experience will include sessions about nursing, chemistry, mental health, and medical lab analysis career fields. Scrubs Camp will also dive into learning about receiving a healthcare education in the Black Hills area at West River Health Science Center (WRHSC), a partnership between BHSU and South Dakota State University (SDSU) in Rapid City.

"This event will give students an opportunity to be educated by medical professionals about all the healthcare careers available to them here in South Dakota," said Samantha Smith, academic coordinator for WRH-SC and one of the organizers of Scrubs Camp.

Scrubs Camp spots are limited to 100-125 9th-12th grade students. Students interested in attending Scrubs Camp can register by March 10 at scrubscamps.sd.gov/camp-locator.

Old Man Winter let us know he is still alive and kicking after last week's bitter cold temperatures and additional snow. It made us all appreciate the much more mild weekend with temps reaching 50 degrees by Sunday. While melting took place on Sunday, at certain places where shelter belts captured the snow from our first blizzard, it looks to be white in places until at least April.

Dick and Erma Albert had a quiet week. They finally got out on Friday, to the Senior Citizen lunch, and had fish sandwiches for Lent. On Sunday, they went to mass at the Catholic Church. They stayed for the pot luck dinner, and then had Bible Study in the afternoon.

Alvin Cordell has started calving with their heifers, and that is keeping him busy. Marlee went to Belle Fourche, on Saturday, to watch grand kids play basketball, and that may be the end of the season. She stayed over, on Sunday, and will go to an appointment in town on Monday. Alvin went in to Camp Crook, to have supper with Terry and Laurie Goehring, at the Over The Edge, on Saturday.

Alvin had talked to Kenny Babb, and learned the sad news that Kay Jean Babb had passed away. Graveside services, at the Camp Crook cemetery, are projected for March eleventh at three o'clock. The plans were, to have funeral services in Broadus, earlier that day. Check the Stevenson Sons website.

Bruce and Lynn Gustafson made a trip to town, on Monday, to prepare for the coming bad weather. They stopped in Belle Fourche to have coffee with Dixie Garr. The below zero weather came in, and was so cold that they needed gloves to touch the doorknob. They were glad for the warmer weather, on Sunday, when they went to church at Little Missouri.

Jake and Callie Davis came out to visit Doug and Julia Davis, on President's Day. It was nice just to relax and have a visit. Julia went to work in Buffalo, on a couple of days this week, but skipped Wednesday, when the temperature stayed way below zero. Her Annie's Ag seminar, on Wednesday, was virtual, and she was glad to stay home for that. By Friday, the sun felt warm, even though the temperature was still quite low.

Rachel Melum and her sister, Sara Livingston, spent time, this week, remodeling their mother's kitchen. They painted cupboards, put up wallpaper, and rearranged everything into a completely new kitchen. Ernie, Rachel and Tommy went to church in Baker, on Sunday, and that evening, they visited at Junior and Shirley's.

Kanyn Padden was one of the wrestlers at the first state girls' wrestling tournament. Her dad is her coach, and that must have worked out good. On Monday, Bryce, Dawn and Dorothy, went to Buffalo for the Boys' basketball parents' night. Dawn took pictures for the event. Then, on Friday, Bryce, Dawn and Dorothy went back to Buffalo for a Girls' Regional game against Wakpala. A boys' make-up game followed, against Bison. On Saturday night, Bryce and Dawn went to a regional finals game between Harding County girls and the Faith girls. With that win, the girls will go on to the sixteen divisional teams. Bryce and Dawn are also quite busy with calving, while sports are keeping all the younger generations busy.

Ronda Cordell stayed fairly close to home, this week. She went to Long Pines Veterinary Service, on Tuesday, to pick up a bottle of medicine. The stormy weather was moving in, and caused some icy patches and drifting on Highway 323. She turned onto the Prairiedale Road, and there was considerably more snow, going through the pines, but there was a track to follow. She went on in to Ekalaka, to eat a bite of lunch, before heading home. When she got back, Clint Zolnoski went with her, over east, to bring an early-calving cow home, and into the barn. She held off delivery until Saturday evening, after the temperature had begun to warm up. Clint's weather thermometer showed twenty-seven degrees below zero, one morning, and much of the week stayed at zero or below. It would 've been a bit cold, even in the barn, for a new calf.

Toney and Linda Hannah came to visit Ronda, a couple times, this week. One day, they checked the trailer house that their work crew had used, and found the water was frozen up, so they came back down to get that problem solved, another day. Clint came by, on Friday, to put new filters in Ronda's water purifier. The water was not tasting good, but it tastes fine now. She stuck a note on the inside of the cupboard door, as a reminder for the next change. On Sunday, Ronda drove up to Bergstrom's to move the horses. One of them had decided the auto-gate was easy to cross, so the easiest cure for that was to move them. Here is some more history from the Urlachers. The first recorded community school at Capitol, was held in the John Teigen log cabin. John mined in the Black Hills during the winter months, so he allowed his cabin to be used as a school, while he was gone in 1888 and 1889. In 1890, a new school building was built. That building was used until 1921, when a fire destroyed the building. Then, Ben Melum's land office was used for a school, until it was closed in 1978. That office, which had also been used for school, was then moved back to the Ben Melum Ranch, and remodeled as the present home of Ernie, Rachel and Tommy

Audio and Visual Plans Could Be in the Future

BELLE FOURCHE-Discussion on plans for recording and streaming the County Commission took a small step forward at the meeting held February

Keynen Merrell of Stereos and Stuff presented the commissioners with several ideas for the Commission Room. Since he had never been in the room. he said he wasn't sure what was needed, but following some discussion he will come with a proposal for the commissioners.

Chairman Stan Harms and Commissioner James Ager hoped that one mic in the center of the table would be sufficient, which Merrell agreed should work. Ager thought that two cameras would be best to get all angles of the small room. He also asked if there would be a way to shut the audio/visual equipment off during a meeting.

Merrell also agreed that a handheld mic would be beneficial and would add the Butte County Commission equipment to a proposal for the March 7 meeting.

Veteran Service Officer Jasen Saivong presented an activity report that covered disability claims and transportation numbers.

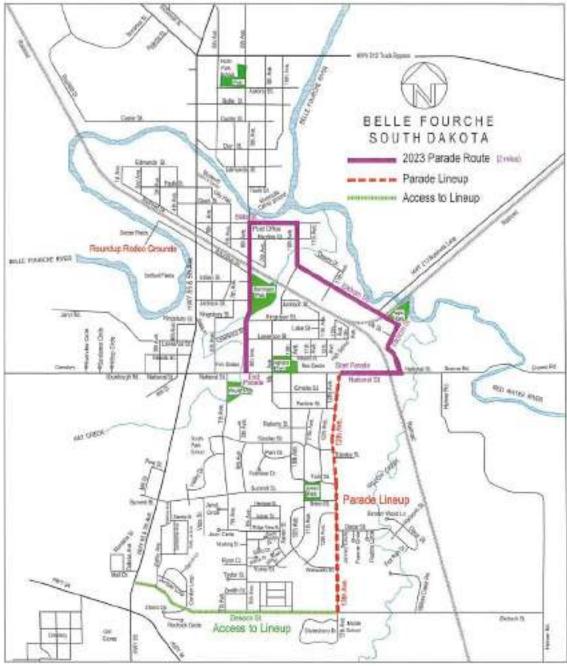

He reminded the commissioners that veterans can call the VA Hotline at 800-316-8387. Veterans can also call his office, 605-723-8387, for more infor-

Saivong also gave a report on an update on his Emergency Management Administrator activities.

The commissioners set up a Board of Adjustments which will give guidance when completing sections on variances in the Subdivision Ordinance. The Butte County Commission Board will act as the Board of Adjustments. Recommendations will come from the Planning Committee. A roll call vote was taken with Harms, Age, Walton, and Herman voting aye and Erk voting nay.

The next regular county commission meeting will be March 7 at 6 p.m.

we are blessed to be working with"

SDKB launched the Foster Friendly app in 2021 which lists area businesses that provide discounted or free services to families whose parents have chosen to be involved in foster or adoptive care. A milestone was reached this past year with 100 businesses who have chosen to participate. The goal of the coming year is to engage 80 more, according to Woolsey.

In the past year Woolsey says SDKB has begun to focus on recruiting more Native American foster parents. They achieved a breakthrough partnering with the Crow Creek Sioux Tribe who has now formed an adoption committee at Ft. Thompson led by Chairman Peter Lengkeek, to promote foster and adoptive services on the reservation and beyond. Recently the tribe recruited and licensed its first foster parents.

"That was almost a supernatural thing," Woolsey said.
"They have now set out to recruit and retain foster parents along with some culturally sensitive training to help Native American children in foster care to keep in touch with their native culture. I was blessed to be allowed to be on the board but they really did all the work."

The "I Belong Project (IBP)," part of the broader America's Kids Belong program, has created more than 135 video profiles of South Dakota children who are legally available for adoption. The videos are created across the state with the help of a local video production company Western Sky Media and Starhaven Films of Sioux Falls. The I Belong Project had an average placement rate of 67% during the past year.

IBP Program Manager
Carly Winterstein shared with the audience that one of those video profiles was of a young girl named Wyland. "Her case worker shared with us that prior to her video being created she had one to two inquiries over five years," Winterstein said.
"Since her video was released,
she received one to two per day.
And early last year she was adopted."

As for their hometown of Belle Fourche, Woolsey is grateful for the growing support he's seen in the local community. "We've been to Belle Fourche Chamber of Commerce meetings and in touch with businesses owners who are interested in coming in on the app," Damen said. "And we're seeing a lot of momentum growing in the churches for wrap-around teams in the area. We're just thankful and encouraged by the support we see here in our hometown."

The organization had their best fundraising year ever last year and has set their most aggressive budget goal for 2023, hoping to raise $311,000, a 20% increase, to fully fund their new growth initiatives. Those include organizing at least 45 awareness events in churches across the state and forming support groups in at least 10 churches. They also plan to add 80 new businesses to the Foster

Friendly app and continue their partnership with Stronger Families Together to recruit another 300 new foster families this year. SDKB also hopes to complete video profiles on 50 children this year and increase its presence in Pennington County, which has been identified as an area of critical need.

"We feel like strategically if we can win Rapid, we'll win the state," Woolsey said. "If we get comfortable, we are not going to be successful. We must keep our eyes on the prize, and that's Jesus and ensuring these kids have enough families. We have to keep moving forward and not quit."

Nearly 300 people gathered in support of South Dakota Kids Belong at the organization's annual gala in Spearfish last week. This year's World Day of Prayer will be a truly ecumenical worship. There are 18 Christian women taking parts in the program, representing nine Belle Fourche churches.

Women in Taiwan have written the service that will be held on March 3, in 170 countries. St. James Episcopal church is hosting the local service on Friday March 3rd, at 2PM. The theme, I have heard about your faith, is taken from St. Paul's letter to the Ephesians.

The Pickers, a local western gospel musical group, will present a concert beginning at 1:45 and accompany hymns throughout the service.

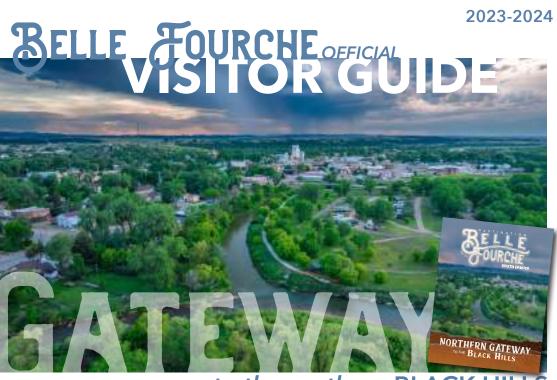

Taiwan, formerly Formosa, is an island nation. They are amongst the top countries that trade with America, supplying electronics and join us in many research projects.

Prayers, Bible reading, hymns and stories of Women in Taiwan, are all part of the worship. Lunch will follow, featuring Taiwan influenced foods. The buffet will include pineapple, rice, noodles, melons and boba tea.

The public is invited at attend the Pickers concert, the worship and a festive lunch.

Once the wool is transported to the Center of the Nation Wool Warehouse it is in the skillful hands of Larry Prater. I got to talk with Larry Prager and listen to his story of working 30 years in Belle Fourche, at Center of the Nation Wool Warehouse.

"I was an Animal Science Major at the University of Wyoming and shearing sheep paid for my college. My dad was a 'misplaced' cattle guy. He really enjoyed his sheep, so we always had sheep at home. Dad would always shear his home sheep with blades and thought I should be a blade shearer. I lost interest real quick". "I went to the shearing school when I was a sophomore in high school and started shearing all the farm flock in Douglas, WY. I sheared sheep through college (graduated in 1974) and weekends, and for 3-4 years after college until I moved to Belle. It was between seven to 8 thousand sheep and I did it by myself, not on a crew. I was the guy that went to all the small lots. I was treated very well".

When Larry moved to Belle Fourche in 1978, at that time Center of the Nation Wool was called "Farmers Ranchers Wool". Larry took over the chief executive officer position in 1993. I asked, "What has kept you in this building for 30 years"? Larry's reply was "I am not sure if it is the gambler's spirit or the challenge or people depending on you.

This is a survivor's business, it has been ever since I have been a part of it. The pool of sheep in the country continues to shrink, a little bit, and we are the link between a wool check and the processors that the wool supply chain leads to. Somebody needs to do that job. The ranchers work hard and take it very seriously. When they come here they need someone also to take it very seriously, and I do.

I have really come to feel if I did anything else it would be boring. Even though we do the same routine every day, you really can't tell when you come in at 8:00 AM what will happen before lunchtime."

"Our trade area really is Western South Dakota, Western North Dakota, Wyoming, Montana, parts of Utah, and Idaho. That is the region we are pretty active in. And then there is Eastern South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, you name it." "About every 5 years we get a container of wool from Hawaii". Center of the Nation Wool deals with about 1,700 producers, mostly from four states, South Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, and North Dakota, but also Colorado, Utah, Idaho, and Nebraska. The company handles 50 to 75 percent of the wool produced in the states they trade-in.

Larry took me through a quick tour of the warehouse. He showed me clean wool, and unprocessed wool, and then he explained the tags and markings on each bale. I was taken aback by all the stacks of wool bales on each side of us. If you have ever driven by the warehouse on Rail Road, it is long but you won't know the capacity of this building from just seeing it from the outside. Probably 95% of the building is to house wool.

Center of the Nation Wool sees 4.5 million pounds, on average per year. 5.2 million pounds was their biggest year, which was recent. The office space is small and not much has changed. I myself grew up in a Southwest Minnesota farm town named Pipestone. The office brought back memories of the '80s gas stations, Coast to Coast, Pipestone Grain Co.

to provide a better experience when selling wool. Consistency and dedication to his wool suppliers is what Larry and his crew have provided during his 30 years of management. Larry has had one of the best coworkers by his side, Lorrie Kimball. Lorrie has answered the phone and worked with the ranchers, helping with the sale of their wool. Larry started his management position about 4 months before Lorrie was hired. I am sure I am missing about 25 other duties that Lorrie has perfected. When the ranchers take their wool into the warehouse it is marked with a number which is the same number each year. It is weighed and tagged. Larry and his crew core test each bale to determine where it will go.

Once the wool leaves Center of the Nation Wool Warehouse it goes to Chargeurs Wool Combing of Jamestown, S.C., the nation's only remaining combing company. Chargeurs scours, cards, and combs the wool and sell it as "top", raw material to "spinner" companies that make it into yarn, which is then made into cloth.

What Kukuchka's and Center of the Nation Wool Warehouse provides is a huge part of the end product of wool. The next time you pick up and wool cap, socks, coat, yarn, or blanket, the probability of it coming through Belle Fourche is high.

Our little ranch town truly touches many moving parts in this world.

Late February Storm Brings Snow and Bitter Cold

Beacon and National Weather Service Reports

A winter storm brought heavy snow and sub-zero temperatures to the area last week with snowfall totals including a foot in St. Onge, 10" near Vale, 9" in Belle Fourche, and 8" in Newell.

The snowstorm began affecting the area on February 20-23, 2023, with most of the snow falling on February 21-22. Initially snow fell in northeastern Wyoming, the Black Hills, and parts of western South Dakota on Monday (20th) and early Tuesday (21st).

Then, widespread snow moved across the area later Tuesday and continued through Wednesday (22nd), before finally diminishing from west to east early on Thursday (23rd). A virtual learning day was declared for Belle Fourche schools on Wednesday and start times were delayed in the area after that as snow removal efforts began. Snowfall amounts of 6 to 12 inches were common across the area, with heavier amounts around 18 inches at Gillette and across portions of the northern Black Hills.

The least amount of snow fell across far northwestern South Dakota, in areas around Buffalo and Bison as well as parts of Weston County, Wyoming.

Winds were not exceptionally strong with this storm (compared to the 50-60 mph winds we are accustomed to), but gusts of 30 to 45 mph occurred east of the Black Hills, causing notable blowing and drifting snow. Even thought a warm up began later, higher winds moved in on Friday creating low visibility and drifting snow on several roads with reports of vehicles in the ditches.

Blizzard conditions were reported over eastern South Dakota where wind gusts were over 50 mph in several spots. Temperatures started out mild on Monday, the 20th, even lasting into Tuesday, the 21st, for some places. Then, an arctic cold front moved south across the area, causing temperatures to plummet.

Some places recorded 24hour temperature drops of more than 50°F between Tuesday and Wednesday. Record low temperatures were noted in spots Thursday morning. Wind chill temperatures bottomed out from -35° to -45°F in several locations.

Looking Back in Belle—

These articles come from newspaper microfilm from the Belle Fourche Public library, using a new microfilm reader and printer. The photographs in most cases are from the Tri-State Museum.

124 years ago THE TIMES March 11, 1897 Mines and Mills Seth Bullock, Dr. Dickinson, James Moodie and Prof. Twombley, the latter being the expert who accompanied John Pierce on his return from the east, got back yesterday from Belle Fourche, where they had been to look over the ground, with a view to the selection of a site upon which to erect the reduction plant that is held in contemplations.

Badly Mixed W. C. Wyncoop, editor of the Denver Mining Industry, and a mining engineer of considerable note who recently visited the Hills, was interviewed by a News reporter on his return to Denver, and among other things said: "As to the mines in the Ragged Top region there is no telling who would be the result if the conditions were more favorable to the production. The entire country appears to be under the control of the great corporations doing business there, including the Homestake company and the Deadwood and Delaware smelter. These corporations control all the water available, and, therefore, the great need for further development - more custom mills and smelters – cannot be satisfied, and the result is that vast quantities of ore that under other condition could be treated at a profit, are not taken out of the mines. The D & D smelter is treating about one hundred tons of ore a day, charging $10.50 per ton for treatment on a 90 percent basis. This only brings out ore which runs from $17 to $20, leaving a vast quantity which runs from $10 to $14 per tone. If the miners there had the same facilities for treating low grade ore that exists at Cripple Creek there is no telling what would be the production of the district, for the ore deposits are simply immense. There are three distinct contracts in the Ragged Top district the ore bodies being from five to twelve feet thick, vertically, and the chutes longer than I have ever seen before. The ore is a quartz in a sandstone, with quartzite below, and the walls are solid and firm, so that but little timbering and absolutely no cribbing is necessary. I never before saw mining of this character. It is just like coal mining. The ore is taken from rooms with pillars left standing, and when a room is worked out a few stalls are put in with lagging tenor twelve feet long, and the pillars are taken out. It is certainly a great camp, and, as I have stated, all that is necessary is the increase in the facilities for treatment." The reporter must have gotten Mr. Wyncoop's statements mixed, for he could not afford to jeopardize his reputation by making such glowing inaccuracies. In the first place, neither the Homestake or D & D Smelter owns a foot of Ragged Top ground. The Homestake does not own any ground outside the Free Milling Belt; it only owns a small portion of the water; the D & D don't own any water to become effective April 1. As the regular city election will be held Tuesday, April 17, it is not likely that a special election will be held to fill the vacancies. Mayor Hickey is just rounding out his eighth year as the city's chief executive with four more years of his present term to run, but, he says that he feels he has held the position long enough – too long, in fact – and he is ready and willing to turn over the municipal reins pronto. Mr. Lefors has been councilman and city commissioner for a total of about seventeen years, and he says that he didn't expect to accept the job for life. Out of his munificent stipend of $1.50 per month Mr. Lefors has saved up enough to keep him comfortably during the remainder of his sojourn upon this mundane sphere, and he believes in passing around the rich plum to some other younger and more ambitious chap. During their years of service as city officials, Messrs. Hickey and Lefors have always had in mind the best interests of the community and in the performance of their duties have been pains-taking and conscientious, often neglecting their personal affairs in so doing. Both have been progressive in spirit and action and it is hoped that worthy successors will be elected next month.

Will Assist in Making Income Tax Return In accordance with the policy of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, as heretofore announced through the Press, of rendering every possible assistance to taxpayers in preparing their income tax return for the year 1922, Deputy Collector, H. H. Mc-Crary, will be in Belle Fourche at the Hampton Hotel from 9 am March 14 to 1 pm March 15, 1923. No charge whatever is made for this service and it is hoped that as many taxpayers as possible will avail themselves of this opportunity to obtain assistance. Experience has shown that considerable expense and annoyance both to taxpayers and to the Government is saved where taxpayers have utilized the service of these men, especially qualified in this line of work.

The Belle Fourche Daily Post March 5, 1947 Warns U. S. May Have Billion Pounds Of Wool on Hand Washington, March 4 – Unless congress acts promptly, the agriculture department may have nearly one billion pounds of wool on its hand within two more years. That's what Undersecretary of agriculture Norris Dodd told the house agriculture committee today. Dodd urged that congress give the department authority to sell its present wool holdings at less than parity prices and that some system of wool import controls be set up. The department already holds 468 million pounds of wool acquired under its price support program. Dodd says the wool can't be sold because foreign growers can pay the tariff and still undersell domestic growers. If congress doesn't set up wool import controls, he said, foreign growers merely will peg their prices slightly below the domestic support level and continue to undersell American producers Dodd suggested that congress also might want to put import controls on finished woolen products. He said if import controls were placed on raw wool only, there is some chance it would be processed first and the shipped into the country.

Marshall Describes Seriousness of Greek Situation

Washington, March 4—Secretary of State Marshall has told the nation just how serous the Greek situation is. He says Greece is on the brink of economic collapse and that her situation is very important to the United States. On the eve of his departure for Moscow, Marshall issued a statement on the Greek situation in which he said that the economic condition of Greece "is on the verge of collapse" \dots that this crisis is of primary importance to this country "in light of the world situation." Marshall's statement was read to reporters by a state department attache. In it, the secretary said the question has been receiving the "urgent attention" of President Truman, executive agencies and congressional leaders. The Greek government itself, Marshall said, has asked for financial aid. While Marshall did not outline any immediate American action, he promised, that a complete public statement on the crisis, and what it means to this nation, can be expected "very soon."

Belle Fourche's Broncs ended their scheduled basketball season Saturday the way it began – with a cliff hanger. With four seconds to go the Broncs trailed 43-42 and Larry Nickelson was fouled in the melee under the basket. With the pressure of a near-perfect season riding on his shoulders, Nickelson stepped to the line and dropped in two free throws to put Belle ahead 44-42. Stevens made one last desperate attempt to shoot from center court, but missed and the game and the season were over. Belle ended its year with a 19-1 record, their lone loss to Rapid City Central at Rapid City. The Broncs began the season with an overtime victory over Dickinson Trinity. They have had several one or two point wins, and a victory in a four-overtime thriller against Lead. Now, says Coach John Pierson, one season has ended and another begins as the Bronc look to the section 8 tournament at Sturgis Thursday and Friday. The Broncs meet Sturgis in the opening game. Lead meets Spearfish in the second game. The team that goes to state will be decided Friday night.

Officials Discuss Drug Problem in Region What was described as a "high incidence of drug traffic" in the area, prompted a meeting of city county, school and church officials at the court house Monday afternoon for a discussion of what could be done to combat the problem. Upshot of the meeting was the formation of the group as a continuing committee and the appointment of State Attorney Leroy Hill and City Attorney Terry Quinn as a sub-committee to look into the possibility of securing a trained specialist to work in the community. On hand for the meeting called by Mayor Henry Hantz, were County Commissioner Bill Smeenk, Sheriff Joe Smit, Deputy Sheriff Margaret Dinnell, States Attorney Leroy Hill, City Attorney Terry Quinn, Rev. Robert Roth, Rev. Willard Stone, Police Chief R.K. Mitchell, Lorraine Collins, chairman of the board of education and Supt. Joe Keegan. The group named Rev. Roth as chairman and Supt. Keegan as secretary. Friction between the sheriff's office and the police department was discussed and the need for cooperation between the two law enforcement agencies emphasized. State Attorney Leroy Hill pointed out that eh drug problem does exist in the community. He cited comments by DCI Agent Dick Meyer to locally owned businesses for community growth and sustainability cannot be overstated. As Albert Einstein once said, "The world as we have created it is a process of our thinking. It cannot be changed without changing our thinking." To ensure a prosperous future for their communities, leaders must prioritize the growth of local businesses, shifting their focus to hidden expenses and stresses that have long-term effects on the community.

"Building Main Street, not Wall Street"-—by John Newby

Small Business, Big Impact

The importance of

There are several considerations that should be at the forefront of every community conversation regarding growth, strategy, and the future. The first consideration is the financial impact of various types of retail establishments on the community. A study a few years ago by Tischler & Associates revealed that specialty retail establishments consisting of locally owned small and medium-sized businesses generate a net yearly return of $326 per 1,000 square feet of store space. In contrast, big-box stores and fast-food outlets not only generate lower tax revenues but also have higher infrastructure and maintenance costs, costing taxpayers

the charitable giving by businesses. The research conducted by Oregon State University for the Small Business Administration found that small and midsized businesses with fewer than 100 employees give an average of $789 per employee in cash and in-kind donations to the community. On the other hand, larger businesses with over 500 employees give only $334 per employee on average, which is

A study by Pennsylvania State University showed that counties with a greater number of smaller and mid-sized locally owned businesses had a greater per capita income growth. In contrast, counties with a higher proportion of large absentee-owned businesses, such as big-box stores and non-locally owned chains, had lower incomes. This finding is not surprising since big-box stores and chains usually provide wages at the lower end of the income spectrum.

Lastly, there is evidence to suggest that locally owned businesses have a positive impact on the health and well-being of the community. Researchers in the Cambridge Journal of Regions, Economy and Society found that counties with a greater proportion of small and mid-sized businesses had lower rates of mortality, obesity, and diabetes. Furthermore, Walter Goldschmidt's study on small agricultural communities in California showed that communities with small and mid-sized owner-operated farms had a more vibrant, diverse economy and a higher quality of life. Considering these findings, it is crucial for smaller and mid-sized communities to prioritize the growth of their local business base. To thrive in a way that benefits future businesses and generations, half of economic development dollars should be directed towards locally owned businesses. Communities and their media companies need to educate the entire community on the advantages of a truly local small business DNA. As the internet continues to drain communities of their much-needed tax dollars, it is increasingly important to create a solid business base to sustain the community.

In conclusion, as Albert Einstein once said and we shared at the beginning of this column, "The world as we have created

It cannot be changed without changing our thinking." The community's future depends on its ability to change its thinking and shift its focus to the growth of locally owned businesses. Safe Travel on the Greenway Trail

news@bellefourchebeacon.com

Normal life without a car is, difficult if not unthinkable in western South Dakota. Places we need to go are are often far apart. Weather is a barrier to walking or cycling. Public transportation is limited.

In Europe, the opportunity to be free of car ownership has been a rewarding experiment.

Trains, and busses offer inexpensive, comfortable, and reliable transportation. In the larger cities light rail trains are available every 5-6 minutes. There's little waiting and travelers can reach destinations quickly and inexpensively.

In Europe, where bicycles and public transportation have always been much more accepted, many cities have moved toward eliminating parking to make more space for green areas.

Although the French love their cars too, a car is not absolutely necessary. They are expensive to drive, maintain, license, and parking space continues to be more limited.

In Europe, bicycles have long been an important means of transportation to work or school. Bicycles are also very popular for recreation and important to tourism.

For this reason, European Governments have invested heavily in Greenways.

Greenways are trails, free of motorized traffic designed for walkers, and cyclists. Electric bicycles are allowed on the Greenway because they are not regarded as motorized.

Apparently, the Greenway movement began in the US in the early 1950s. The purpose was to encourage healthy lifestyles mainly in urban and suburban areas that were beginning to burgeon after WWII.

In Europe, Greenways became popular in the late 1980s and 1990s. It's apparent that a great deal of expense has gone into the Greenway system. Often they are built on abandoned rail lines or natural corridors of unused roads and tracks.

The Greenways movement in Europe promotes good health, nature conservation, air quality improvement, safe access to work and school, and tourism. Generally, the Greenways are safe, the ground is often smooth concrete, although there are often stretches between established Greenways where there is rougher terrain, deep gorges over rivers on narrow bridges.

Both public transportation and the use of bicycles makes sense, but giving up having a car is profoundly daunting initially. Thus far in our travel research, experiencing the options is helpful. Trains are good (most of the time) train stations are not especially pleasant. (nearly always) Buses are comfortable, and so relaxing, it's hard to stay option. It requires physical effort, knowledge and skills. I have learned quite a few things. It is advisable to carry tools on the journey. Helmuts are a must, as is a strong lock, rather than a chain lock (bicycle theft is common and thieves are known to use professional lock cutting equipment), a spare inner tube or two in the event of a puncture, and a variety of tools to change or repair the puncture.

Freedom from car ownership, at least temporarily has been a good ride so far!

Greenways are marked by common signage. Otherwise at times it would be completely possible to take a turn on an unmarked path and end up lost... Note the blue and green sign with icons of a walker and cyclist on the left of this beautiful bridge that serves as an overpass over a busy highway. Meg

This photo was taken on a Greenway bridge over the Tech River. Note the deep drop to the water. The heights of bridge passageways on the Greenways mountains regions are dramatic, but dizzying. The bridge passages for cyclists are often wide enough to ride down the middle unless there is a lot of traffic, and the cyclist must ride on the appropriate side. In continental Europe, drivers drive on the right side of the road as we do here in America. Sometimes the bridges are narrow, perhaps only 3" wide. Those of us who are less confident prefer to dismount the bike and walk, without looking down if at all possible!. Meg English Photo

Here is a typical "connection passage" between the safer sections of a Greenway trail. Note the narrow trail, the uneven surface, and especially the very, steep, deep drop-off on the right hand side. The word "sauf" on the sign means "except" which I guess means only cycles, not motorized vehicles are free to go through." In any case, cyclists must be extremely cautious on such passages. Even a tiny slip off the path could result in a disastrous fall. Meg English Photo

Longtime Aberdeen City Councilor tapped to lead South Dakota Democratic Party

Slaight-Hansen earns resounding win at State Central Committee meeting

joe@thedakotascout.com

The South Dakota Democratic Party has elected Brown County's Jennifer Slaight-Hansen to lead the political organization for the next two years.

The former Aberdeen City Councilor defeated John Cunningham of Sioux Falls during the party's annual State Central Committee meeting Saturday in Oacoma, walloping the retired public administrator with 92 percent of the delegate vote.

She succeeds current chairman Randy Seiler, who has filled the position since 2019.

Both candidates told attend-

— about the party's fundraising deficiencies, but Slaight-Hansen leaned into her connection with young people. She said too many are registering independent in South Dakota, a trend that needs to be addressed before the Democratic Party can grow in South Dakota.

My primary goal is to cultivate future leaders," she said. "We need to get them under our umbrella, and encourage them to be a Democrat."

Slaight-Hansen has previously served on the executive board of the South Dakota Democratic Party and as chairwoman of the Brown County Democrats. She also served on the Aberdeen

City Council for a decade and helped found the Aberdeen Downtown Association.

Cunningham, who's previously run for Minnehaha County Commission and state treasurer, congratulated his opponent during concession remarks.

"No matter where I'm at, I'll be a phone call away in case you want to just vent about all the frustrations you're going to experience," he said.

Shane Merrill defeated Craig Brown in the contest for vice chair of the South Dakota Democratic Party.

Larry Olsen was re-elected party treasurer and Toni Diamond defeated Lorri May for party secretary. New terms for party officers

Jim Abourezk, brawler, maverick U.S. senator, dies judo lessons and sell blood in order

Senator who stood up for Indians battled President Carter over Panama Canal

Jonathan Ellis

jonathan@thedakotascout.com

When he recounted his wartime experience as a sailor during the Korean War, Jim Abourezk would often joke that he spent the war fighting over women in Japanese bars.

Abourezk was born to brawl, whether it was in bars, courtrooms or on the floor of the U.S. Senate, where he represented South Dakota from 1973 to 1979 as the first Arab-American senator. A proud, in-vour-face progressive liberal who championed Indians while attacking the privileged, Abourezk delighted in bludgeoning his enemies, of which he had many.

A man whose cussing would be considered copious even for a sailor, Abourezk had an insatiable appetite for good food, and, in an earlier period of life, good drink and cigars. He died Friday, on his 92nd birthday.

Abourezk's time in elected office was short: His one term in the Senate was preceded by one term in the U.S. House. But his presence on the state's political scene was felt for decades, and his brief stint in office jumpstarted the success of two younger Democrats, Tom Daschle and later Tim Johnson, who would each go on to successful and lasting House and Senate

"My career would not have happened if it weren't for Jim Abourezk," said Daschle, who served on Abourezk's Senate staff, a launching pad for his own 26year congressional career.

"I think there are few people who had more impact on public policy in eight years than Jim Abourezk," Daschle said.

Modest upbringing in Indian

James G. Abourezk was born in 1931 in Wood, South Dakota near the Rosebud Indian Reservation. His father, who had immigrated from Lebanon in 1898, opened a store in Wood in 1920. Growing up in Indian Country, Abourezk had a unique window into the impoverished, hardscrabble life of Sioux Indians. As a young man, he looked down on them, he admitted in his autobiography, but as an adult he would champion them.

After getting expelled his senior year for tying a teacher to a radiator, and then getting kicked out of his house by his parents, Abourezk moved in with his brother in Mission. He graduated from Mission High School and, at age 17 and with the permission of his parents, joined the Navy, which he hoped would open a world to women and adventure.

He completed basic training and then graduated as an electrician's mate before being assigned duty in post-World War II Japan. A year later, in 1950, war broke out in Korea, and Abourezk assisted war efforts for allied troops. He took judo lessons, but much of his free time was spent chasing women and drinking beer. He stayed in Japan for three years.

'I had to ask for a transfer after three years," he said in an interview. "I didn't think my body could take it anymore.'

After leaving the Navy in 1952. he made a short attempt at ranching on land his father left when he died in 1951. But Abourezk couldn't stand the isolation. He married his first wife, Mary, later that year, and the two started a family. Abourezk worked as a bartender in Wood, South Dakota and then Winner, where one of his chief skills was fighting unruly drunks. In Winner, a family doctor from the East Coast introduced him to The Nation, The New Republic and journalist I.F. Stone, which set the direction for his left-wing political

From Navy and bartending to engineering and law

In his mid-20s, with a wife and two children and uncertain career prospects, Abourezk enrolled in college at the South Dakota School of Mines and Technology. The family lived in a veterans' housing apartment. By day he took classes. By night he would bartend, teach to earn money. Work proved equally elusive after he earned his engineering degree in 1961, and in 1963 he enrolled at the University of South Dakota School of Law, fulfilling a dream to go into the law.

He established a law practice in Rapid City, and in 1968 ran unsuccessfully as the Democratic nominee for state attorney general. Although he lost, Abourezk proved to be a vigorous campaigner and debater. Following the election, rural electric cooperatives hired him to campaign against a bill championed by Gov. Frank Farrar. The bill, which narrowly passed in the Legislature, created a statewide commission to regulate gas and electric providers and was thought to give big energy providers advantages over rural co-ops. The bill was referred to voters, and Abourezk led the opposition, traveling the state making speeches against the new commission and Farrar.

The controversy ruined Farrar, who went on to lose re-election in 1970. The year proved pivotal for South Dakota Democrats. The state's two longtime Republican congressmen, E.Y. Berry and Ben Reifel, both retired. Republican Sen. Karl Mundt, a political powerhouse, had been incapacitated by a stroke. Abourezk considered running for governor, but, to appease his wife, ran for South Dakota's western congressional seat.

Political victory

He beat Republican Fred Brady, running against the Vietnam War and highlighting Brady's call for mandatory citizenship camps for the nation's youth, which Abourezk compared to Nazi Germany's Hitler youth program. Election night in 1970 saw Abourezk and Democrat Frank Denholm capture the state's two congressional seats while Democrat Dick Kneip beat Farrar.

With Mundt unable to run in 1972, Abourezk ran for the seat against Robert Hirsch, a Yankton lawyer and Republican majority leader in the state Senate. Abourezk's victory on election night was tempered by Sen. George McGovern's defeat to Richard Nixon in the presidential race. Abourezk and McGovern held a joint election-night party, but it was a somber evening when McGovern was unable to carry his home state and lost to Nixon in a landslide.

Shortly after being sworn into his Senate seat, Abourezk and McGovern traveled to Pine Ridge to negotiate with members of the American Indian Movement in an effort to end their standoff with federal agents at Wounded Knee.

Abourezk and McGovern would serve together for the next six years, Abourezk often in the shadow of McGovern, who was still considered a potential national candidate for president or vice president. while Abourezk was considered a maverick who would filibuster bills he didn't like. The two reveled in their liberal political ideologies. They both visited Cuba and befriended Cuban President Fidel Castro, and in 1977, they took a team of basketball players from the University of South Dakota and South Dakota State University to play games against Cuba's all-star team.

"He was a charmer – a very smart guy," Abourezk said of Castro. The relationship, as well as later relationships with dictators in the Middle East, would open Abourezk to criticism that he coddled dictators and murderers. Too liberal for critics

He was also criticized for favoring government regulation and higher taxes, which made him a target for the economic policies that were ascendant in the Republican Party and which would emerge dominant in the 1980 election of Ronald Reagan.

"The reason why American business is drowning in an ocean of governmental red tape is precisely because of busybodies like Sen. Abourezk, who spend their waking hours dreaming up solutions for which there are no problems,' wrote the conservative John Lofton in a 1976 column critical of Abourezk.

Abourezk cared little about what his critics said. He was strong willed, which put him at odds with his colleagues.

'At that time at least, a lot of compromise was done to get things done," said Glenn Feldman, an Abourezk staffer. "Jim was not a good compromiser."

He was also a frequent critic of Israel, which put him at odds with both Democrats and Republicans.

"They are mean bullies," he said of Israel in 2015. "They are like the Islamic State except they know better than to behead people on camera."

In the Senate, he filibustered a bill to deregulate the natural gas industry, and he killed a bill that would have given the airline industry billions of dollars to buy quieter

But it was his work on behalf of the nation's Native Americans where Abourezk cemented his

"His legacy is still part of the Senate," Daschle said. "We didn't have an Indian Affairs Committee before Jim Abourezk.'

One of his most important pieces of legislation was the Indian Child Welfare Act, Feldman said. Prior to the act, Indian children were routinely removed from their homes and tribes, and they would lose contact with their culture. ICWA required child welfare agencies to place children who were removed from abusive homes with family members or within their

"He was well known in Indian Country as a guy who had spent eight years fighting very hard for Indian rights and sovereignty," Feldman said.

It was clear that Abourezk did not like the Senate. On Jan. 24, 1977 he announced he would not seek a second term, citing his family, which he called his "TV answer.'

"My family is part of it, of course, but I can't take any more of this stuff," he said later that year.

'I resent that I don't have time to think, maybe to write, to take photographs, to play my guitar. I need to make more money and retire some debts. I know I'm tired of marginal victories. And each time you run you have to peel off a principle here, a principle there. I'm not disillusioned, just realistic.'

On his final day in the Senate, he told reporters: "I can't wait to get out of this chicken (expletive)

who had succeeded him in the Senate. Abourezk had always blamed Pressler for fueling the narrative that Abourezk had not run for a second Senate term because he feared Pressler. Now, Pressler was battling for his political life against Tim Johnson.

South Dakota lawmakers must

South Dakota lawmakers are being presented with an opportunity to promote prosperity in our state, one tax reduction at a time.

This past week, a bill (HB 1137) dedicated to reducing sales tax from 4.5 percent to 4.2 percent across the state passed the Joint Appropriations Committee. While it may not seem like much, this bill would save South Dakotan taxpayers over $173 million.

Considering the Appropriations Committee adopted an ongoing revenue projection of $2.38 billion for the 2024 fiscal year, a budget that's $182 million more than the one proposed by Gov. Noem in December, it's only fair that South Dakotans keep their hard-earned

Across the state, South Dakotans are still feeling the pain of record inflation stretching the dollar at the grocery store, and feeling less control over rising costs. Excessive tax burdens only make matters worse taxpayers suffer, the government expands, and the economy stifles.

South Dakotans are being overtaxed and have been overburdened by more than $4 million since July 2021. That's 66 times the median household income in the state. In addition to putting tremendous financial strain on families, high taxes slow the economy and hurt employment.

Skyrocketing inflation rates aren't helping. The South Dakota inflation rate reached 13.7 percent in August 2022, causing households to spend $751 more that month than they would have spent on the same goods and services in January 2021.

The strain associated with inflation has taken a major phycological toll on adults in the state, with 36.5 percent reporting that they consider record inflation rates to be "very stressful," according to a U.S. Census Bureau survey. The last thing anxious taxpayers need are burdensome sales taxes to increase their financial anxiety.

At a time of such high inflation families are looking for relief from that burden. With a historical surplus in the state coffers, no South Dakotan should be struggling to save for their own families. Such a large overhead from the ongo-liberal columnist, to discuss his new book, "Washington Babylon." The book included a chapter on Pressler, which accused the Republican senator of being gay and a "dunderhead." Pressler lost to Johnson a few weeks later.

Abourezk made frequent trips to the Middle East, taking friends with him. Tom Dempster, a former Republican state senator, went on one of the trips. Abourezk had many political contacts in the area, which included Syrian President Bashar al-Assad, and the former senator introduced his friends to those contacts.

Abourezk, Dempster said, was a 'brilliant, alpha male, take-control

In more recent years, Abourezk

Keith Moore ing revenue projection gives state lawmakers ample room to lower taxes for voters already coping with current economic hardships. Providing tax relief would also tamper down big government overreach and boost economic growth while limiting spending.

Unfortunately, regardless of the State's fiscal health, the response to any proposed tax reduction is all too often the same – how will we make up the revenue? Simple budget transparency.

Too much government spending is the real driver of the current, unsustainable tax burden. All it does is harm economic growth and prevent people from investing in their families and businesses. Now is the time to shift the paradigm and look critically at how the state is spending our taxpayer money.

State spending must be prioritized to core government functions. Renewed focus on budget transparency allows us to see where we are spending outside of government's role and spending for special-interest groups. Greater transparency means a greater stake for citizens and lawmakers in the process and empowering them to take ownership of outcomes. South Dakotans are counting on their legislators to lead on eliminating wasteful spending and special interest handouts in the coming years.

Today, our historic surplus must be returned to the pockets of hardworking South Dakotans instead of being spent on expanding government and growing budgets. When we couple responsible tax cuts with spending and budgeting reforms, then we are truly being fiscally responsible.

Abourezk's 1989 memoir, "Advise and Dissent," made the news. Abourezk had described a confrontation he had with Delaware Sen. Joe Biden. The scene became newsworthy 40 years later because Biden was seeking the Democratic nomination for president and had been criticized for working with segregationist

The 2023 legislative session is nearing the end with only two weeks left. The last day of session is March 9th and March 27th is reserved for gubernatorial vetoes. We made it through Crossover Day and both the Senate and House continue to address the bills that remain. If you have comments or questions, contact me at neal. pinnow@sdlegislature.gov and please put 28B in the subject line. By doing placing 28B in the subject line, this will draw my attention to your email and I will make sure those are priority over the hundreds of other emails that we receive on a daily basis.

This week, once again, has been filled with many discussions regarding the 2024 revenue and expense budget. The only difference this week were the big three tax reduction bills were in front of House Appropriations for debate. The first one to arrive, HB 1137, was the sales tax reduction from 4.5% to 4%. This bill was eventually amended to a .3% reduction in the rate therefore landing at 4.2% and passed the House Appropriations committee. This is projected to save the residents of South Dakota $102,592,908. The next bill to come before the committee was the sales tax reduction on food from 4.5% to 0%. This bill did not fare very well and was defeated in committee. The last big tax reduction bill to be heard was dealing with a $300 credit per owner occupied property. This bill was also defeated in House Appropriations committee. HB 1137 was heard on the House floor, Wednesday the 22nd, and passed by a 66-3 vote. It is now headed for consideration in the Senate. HB 1039, revising the payment of tuition for members of the SDNG from 50% to 100% at any in-state institution. The tuition becomes available after the federal tuition program has been exhausted. HB 1200, which require a constitutional amendment to obtain 1/35th of the signatures required from each of the 35 districts within the state, was heard and passed the House as well. HB 1059, establishing a community paramedic endorsement, was heard and passed the House. This endorsement will expand the duties for paramedics and allow them, especially in rural areas, to assist with other medical related issues.

We are continuing to review appropriation bills as well as tax reduction bills for the next couple weeks. Thank you and please feel free to reach out to me at the email above. If you make it to the Capitol, please send me an email and we will set up a time to visit.

Primary election recount boards would become partisan under proposed legislation

Measure would also exclude family members of candidates from serving on a recount

Jonathan Ellis

PIERRE – When she went into her primary election recount last June, Rep. Amber Arlint had a 12-vote lead over her closest Republican competitor.

When she walked out of that recount, she had a nine-vote lead. And an idea on how to change recounts.

Arlint, who represents District 12 in Sioux Falls, said Friday that she was surprised to find two Democrats and one Republican on her three-member recount board in a race among Republicans.

Current law requires county recount boards to be comprised of one member from a political party whose candidate for governor in the last gubernatorial election won that county, as well as one member each of the two largest parties in the tion to change that formula for primary elections, where Republicans vote for Republicans and Democrats vote for Democrats. Under her proposal, recount boards for primary elections would be comprised of members of the political party in which the race is being recounted.

"It makes complete sense," Sen. Lee Schoenbeck said

Her bill also includes language barring close family members of candidates, including spouses, parents, siblings and in-laws, from serving on recount boards. And it expands the current oath that members take, which now requires good faith and impartiality, to also include that people on a board meet the qualifications to be on the board.

General Election recounts would remain the same: One member each of the two largest political parties and a member from the party whose candidate had the most votes for governor of that county.

Sen. Reynold Nesiba supported the bill Friday. But he said he thinks the bi-partisan boards have worked well.

The measure will go to the full Senate where it is expected to pass.

Kids consuming sugary drinks, trust in media, wolf rampage, Abdnor & McGovern

Jonathan Ellis

A new study finds alarming, though not surprising, evidence that nutrition among the nation's youth is in freefall. One in three children between the ages of 1 and 5 did not eat fruit daily in the past week during a survey conducted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Half the children in the survey did not consume a daily vegetable in the past week.

But they are consuming sugary drinks. Three in five drank a sugary drink in the past week.

South Dakota ranked below the national average. Thirty-seven percent of children did not eat fruit daily and 53 percent did not eat a vegetable. But 58 percent did consume a sugary beverage.

Louisiana had the fewest number of children who had consumed a vegetable at 64 percent. But 70 percent had consumed at least one sugary beverage.

In additional Louisiana news, the 2023 Mardi Gras celebration in New Orleans kicked off on Feb. 21, complete with the usual decadence and debauchery that mark Mardi

The celebration has its roots in pagan parties for the spring, but Pope Gregory XIII made it a Christian holiday in 1582.

The first known celebration of Mardi Gras, in what would become the United States, occurred on March 3, 1699 when French explorers Iberville and Bienville LeMoyne, sent to defend France's interests in the New World, camped a few miles upstream from the mouth of the Mississippi River. Years later, Bienville established New Orleans, "and people began to celebrate Carnival with private balls and public masked spectacles," says the U.S. Census Bureau.

Yet this year's celebration finds New Orleans in decline. In one year, from July 1, 2021 to July 1, 2022, the city's population fell by nearly 2 percent. Single men should note, however, that 53 percent of the city's population is female.

Trust in national media outlets continues sinking, with half of Americans in a recent survey saying those outlets intentionally try to mislead, misinform or persuade the public. Fifty-two percent of respondents do not think national news organizations care about the best interests of their readers, viewers or listeners.

The survey was conducted by Gallup and the Knight Foundation. More Americans of all political affiliations hold an unfavorable opinion of news media now than in late 2019 and early 2020, when a similar survey was conducted.

"The rise is especially pronounced among independents but it is also apparent among Democrats - who typically hold more favorable views of the media," the authors conclude.

The numbers for local news outlets were better. Fifty-three percent said they think local news organizations care about how their reporting can affect their community. And 44 percent don't believe that local outlets intend to mislead. Twenty-five percent did think local outlets tried to mislead, while 29 percent neither agreed nor disagreed.

Nine people were injured after a wolf ventured into the Indian village of Benakanahalli and began attacking villagers who were sleeping, reports The Times of India.

The attack took place late at night as villagers were sleeping on the verandas of their homes.

The wolf also attacked cattle.

The nine victims were treated at a hospital and released, but the incident set off a panic. Forestry officials have warned residents to be cautious when leaving their homes at night or in the early hours of the morning. Residents have asked that the wolf be trapped and relocated.

George McGovern and the man who vanquished him from the U.S. Senate, Jim Abdnor, didn't have their political parties in common, but they did have much beyond politics in common. The two men tacked eerily similar paths in life.

Abdnor, a Republican who beat McGovern in the 1980 Senate race as McGovern ran for a fourth term, would have turned 100 on Feb. 13. McGovern would have turned 100 last summer on July 19. Born just seven months apart, both men served in World War II and grew up in rural South Dakota before being elected to the House of Representatives and then the U.S. Senate.

They also died within a few months of each other. Abdnor departed first on May 16, 2012 and McGovern a few months later on Oct. 21, 2012. Incidentally, then-Vice President Joe Biden delivered the eulogy for McGovern in Sioux Falls.

Of the two, McGovern had the more illustrious political career. Besides those three Senate terms he served twice in the House and was the Democratic nominee for president in 1972. Abdnor served just one Senate term, losing to Tom Daschle in

But his victory in 1980 coincided with the rise of the Reagan revolution, and his one term arguably did more to nurture a political future. Current South Dakota Senate President Pro Tempore Lee Schoenbeck worked for Abdnor. As did Sen. John Thune and other notable GOP activists. Thune paid homage to his former boss to mark what would have been his 100th birthday.

"He was a public servant driven by a sense of the common good, not 'good politics' or personal ambition," Thune wrote. "And he was a selfless mentor who inspired the people around him to be better.'

In departure from last year, GOP Senate leadership on board for tax cut

But it won't necessarily be the proposal adopted by the House

Jonathan Ellis

jonathan@thedakotascout.com

PIERRE - Last year, lawmakers in the South Dakota House of Representatives were clamoring to cut taxes. Their counterparts in the Senate, not so much.

But it's a new year. With it comes more record revenues and a $104 million sales tax cut passed by the House of Representatives Wednesday.

The Senate's Republican leadership is singing a new tune this year, signaling that the Senate is on board with a tax cut.

The Senate stayed out of the way while the House whittled down its preferred tax proposals.

Senate Majority Leader Casey Crabtree said Thursday. The House ditched Gov. Kristi's Noem's grocery tax repeal and a bill to reduce the property tax

Instead, the chamber adopted a bill to lower the overall state sales tax rate from 4.5 percent to 4.2 percent.

The House overwhelmingly approved its preferred tax break 63-3.

But that's not necessarily what the Senate will do, Crabtree said. An across-the-board cut is one option, but it might not be at the same rate adopted by the House. There is also a desire by some in the Senate to consider a property tax reduc-

Crabtree predicted that the governor's grocery tax repeal will not be part of the conversation. That will appease House leaders who want to retain a broad rate that applies to most items and services in the state.

Regardless, he predicted taxpayers will get a break.

"We do know it's going to be significant," he said.

Senate President Pro Tempore Lee Schoenbeck was the biggest hurdle to last year's efforts to cut taxes. Schoenbeck said he is open to a tax cut this year, but he is still moving cautiously because of concerns about whether the state will have the resources to pay for its programs.

"The appropriators have convinced me that some version of it is possible," said Schoenbeck, a Watertown Republican.

A compromise between the two chambers will be negotiated in the final two weeks of the session, which started this past Monday.

COUNTERPOINT: Food tax cut not the relief South Dakotans need

Guest column by Rep. Chris Karr

This year we are exploring three different proposals for providing tax relief to South Dakota taxpayers. I have brought House Bill 1137 to reduce the overall sales tax rate from 4.5 to 4.0 percent. There are eight reasons I believe this is the best tax cut for South Dakota.

IT'S THE LAW.

This tax cut addresses the current statute in state law, known as the Partridge Amendment. In 2016, the half-penny sales tax increase was passed by the Legislature and went into statute. At that time, an amendment was added to this legislation that would reduce that half-penny sales tax upon certain criteria being met. This amendment the Partridge Amendment said that if we start collecting online sales tax from businesses that do not have a physical presence in South Dakota (known as "remote sellers"), we will reduce the sales tax by .1 percent once we collected $20 million from those remote sellers. At the time, $100 million in remote seller tax receipts is what it would have taken to reduce the tax rate back down to 4.0 percent. This amendment is in statute. The amendment was brought to get the final votes

The problem with the Partridge Amendment language that went into statute was that it was ambiguous and not needed to increase the sales tax

in 2016 from 4.0 to 4.5 percent.

workable. The language is confusing about when to start counting the money, and how to count the money. For example, if a company was already submitting sales tax prior to the state collecting from remote sellers, should they be counted towards this new formula? Should it be calendar year or fiscal year? If the threshold was not met, would it accumulate or start over every year? These are just a few of the questions that cannot be answered by the Partridge Amendment.

Another problem with the statute is that it focused solely on sales tax collection from remote sellers who don't have nexus in South Dakota. As soon as Amazon opened a return center, such as the location inside of Kohl's in Sioux Falls, they were deemed to have nexus and their tax submissions no longer counted towards our remote sellers calculation in the Partridge Amendment.

The question is, have we collected enough from remote sellers to live up to the intent of the law? As of 2022, internet sales make up roughly 11 percent of all taxable retail sales in South Dakota. This is a large increase since 2016, where the amount was less than 1 percent. Since the Wayfair decision, South Dakota has been able to collect taxes on online sales, and there has been a major increases in the amount of taxable sales since 2016. In 2016, there was $89 million of online taxable sales, compared to 2022's $1.896 billion in online taxable

It is clear, that in fiscal year 2023, we are fully realizing brick and mortar and remote seller sales tax collection, and it is time to address the intent of Partridge Amendment.

Despite the ambiguous nature of the amendment, it is time we uphold the intent of the 2016 legislation and roll-back the sales tax accordingly. FORESEEABLE

SURPLUS DOLLARS

We continue to have budget surpluses of hundreds of millions of dollars. The surplus for fiscal year 2023 is estimated to be over $230 million, and $320 million for fiscal year 2024. Foreseeable revenues are such that we can afford to implement a tax cut and still take care of the state's obligations, and provide inflationary increases for those obligations going

OUR ECONOMY IS FORESEEABLY STRONG

It is reasonable to take into account the impact of federal stimulus on our economy, however, it is not the only reason our tax revenue has been bullish. If we look at the time frame from 2010 to 2022 and remove outliers where the state received unordinary stimulus dollars, and other years with outliers, we still have an average rate of sales tax growth of 4.3 percent. In a time when South Dakota's economic metrics are very strong, it is clear that recent growth is not entirely the result of federal intervention. South Dakota has strong organic growth and it is foreseeably reliable. The data and organic growth support this tax relief plan.

INFLATION IMPACTS

MORE THAN FOOD Inflation has hit all areas of life and has now impacted all goods and services that we consume. The overall sales tax reduction would provide relief in a broad spectrum to include: groceries, prepared food, clothing, haircuts, utilities, cell phone, events, transportation, farm machinery/ag equipment, and services, just to name a few.

LESS MARKET DISRUPTION

Food tax is a very reliable source of tax revenue during economic hard times as it is less elastic than the overall sales tax. Removing a tax all together will have larger market disruption than decreasing the tax on all items a little bit.

IT'S A RATE, NOT A DOLLAR AMOUNT

The overall sales tax reductions adjusts the tax 'rate'. Because it is a rate that is being adjusted, it stays relevant into the future even with the impact of inflation.

Unlike the property tax relief bill that would provide approximately a $300 credit to single owner-occupied residences. The problem with using a dollar amount in this instance is that the value of that $300 today will become eroded as time goes by due to inflation and property valuation increases. The relief is diminished quickly with the property tax bill versus the overall sales tax reduction.

EASY TO MODIFY AND IMPLEMENT

The overall sales tax rate is easy for businesses to modify and implement versus the food sales tax plan that creates complications in determining what is a prepared food and what is not. If an item is heated; if a store combines two or more ingredients; if a store provides a utensil; they may not be eligible for the tax cut.

Examples would include meat and cheese tray, relish trays, many items from the meat counter and delis. If the deli makes a sandwich it would be taxed, versus a sandwich that was packaged and prepared by the stores supplier.

Additionally, if our state needs to weather an economic storm in the future, it is easier to adjust the overall sales tax than to reimplement a tax that has been eliminated.

OVERALL SALES TAX IS ELASTIC

When the overall sales tax was increased from 4.0 to 4.5 percent, mathematically, we should have seen a 12.5 percent growth in sales tax collections. The actual growth was 10.5%. This is because overall sales tax is elastic. Basic economics tells us that a tax increase creates less discretionary dollars, and consumption will decrease. On the flip side, a tax decrease, as is currently being discussed, will incentivize more consumption and spending and could result in more tax receipts than expected. This could potentially have less of an impact on state revenues than projected.

BOTTOM LINE

The overall sales tax cut provides much needed tax relief in all areas of our lives, especially at a time when inflation is hitting our pocketbooks pretty hard. Government shouldn't keep more than it needs to operate – the state needs to give the people of South Dakota their money back. This bill lives up to the intent of what is in statute; it is realistic and it's a more responsible way to look at the surplus dollars and provide meaningful tax relief.

CITY COMMISSION

Full House at Newell Commission Meeting

Betty Bruner news@bellefourchebeacon.com

NEWELL-More chairs were added as the crowd at the regular town meeting held Monday, February 20. Most were there to be part of the building permits for the town, while others were there to give their opinions on a variety of issues.

Marian Neumayer informed the commissioners that the city of Belle Fourche was willing to donate their entire inventory of Christmas decorations, including all the light bulbs. The decorations will be stored in Belle Fourche until June when Newell will take possession.

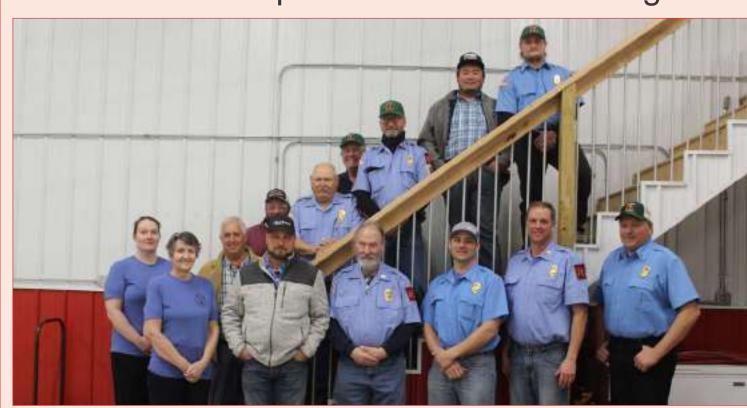

Neumayer also asked the commissioners to put an irrigation tap on the west end of her property. Mayor Ken Wetz instructed her to fill out the paperwork and be prepared to pay the hook-up charge. Although tap fees were increased later in the meeting, Neumayer will be able to pay the previous fees set in February 2022 of $750.

A nuisance letter sent to Dakota Myers and Donald Jones brought an irate response from Myers. The temporary building permit that was issued November 15, 2021 for the property at 601 E. 6th Street had expired and he received a letter from the town that the Tiny House must be removed by March 1, 2023. In part, the letter reads "By this letter, the town agrees to grant an extension to temporary permit to give you more time to remove the Tiny House. The Tiny House must be removed by March 1st, 2023." The letter continued to inform Myers and Jones that the Town may abate the issue by removing or demolishing the building and then assessing the cost against the property.

NISLAND – The Nisland/Arpan Volunteer Fire Department and Auxiliary held their annual meeting and dinner on Saturday, February 18 at the fire hall. The group of firefighters, auxiliary and their families gathered in the relatively new fire hall for dinner first and then reports. The meal, consisting of pot luck dishes and beef brisket, smoked by firefighter Maynard Yule, Rhonda Vallery gave the report for the auxiliary.

"We figured that right now we can go by the quote, 'If you build it, they will come," said Vallery, referring to the new fire hall and the influx of new auxiliary and firefighter members in the past couple years. The department started their fundraiser for a new hall several years ago and finished the hall in the past year.

Vallery and her cohorts in the auxiliary reported on the past year. Items shared included the soup supper in January, baking pies for donation for the Miller Angus bull sale, the potato topper supper in March, Father's Day Potluck in June, Pie Sale at the Butte/Lawrence Fair, brisket feed in August, selling raffle tickets on large toy firetrucks donated by Kohls, Fire School, also in August and the retirement of Auxiliary Chairperson Cathy Capp. She talked

NEWELL - The High Plains restaurant has been a hive of activity lately, with the Valentines dinner, Jake Elwood in concert on February 17 and the entity hosting a special fundraiser for a family who lost their home and all belongings to a fire shortly after Christmas.

The Shaykett/Caruso family of Nisland had a house fire in December and, although many people rose to the occasion and supplied for immediate needs, the family had to start from scratch. They were able to secure a place to live just outside Newell, but the enormity of finding furniture, home goods and basic necessities was daunting.

Not to worry, several people gathered together to plan a fundraiser on February 11 hosted by High Plains, who donated a portion of each meal sold during the evening to the fundraiser. Also, around 60 people donated items for the silent and live auction which was held in conjunction with the meal fundraiser.

about the letter, adding that it seemed to be targeting them. He added he would gladly renew the building permit if that is what is needed.

Mayor Wetz explained that the letter was part of the legal requirements set by the city's attorney.

"I don't foresee any problem," said Wetz when Myers affirmed they would renew the permit. Several building permits were issued including Lynn Koehn and David Swenby. Koehn's permit was for a woven wire fence to be built around his yard at 211 1st St. Swenby is moving in a modular home at 409 E. 1st St. Boom Concrete received approval to build a storage unit at 202 Girard Ave, however, according to Butte County Planner, Cyndi Mayes, all new construction must have digital plans on file at the county before final approval. In other business, the commissioners approved a number of resolutions centered around drinking water, sewer, and irrigation taps. The project for Water System improvements will cost $1,142,000. The Waste Water Improvement project comes in at a cost of $709,000.

Resolution 01-2023 is a resolution giving approval "to certain drinking water facilities improvements". It gives approval to the "issuance and sale of a revenue bond to finance, directly or indirectly, the improvements to the facilities; approving the form of the loan agreement and the revenue bond and pledging project revenues and collateral to secure the payment of the revenue bond; and creating special funds and accounts for the administration of funds for operation of the system and retirement of the revenue bond and providing for a segregated special charge or surcharge for the payment of the bonds." This is necessary for the use of the grant given to the city to improve water and sewer needs.

Resolution 02-2023 is worded similarly with respect to the sewer work to be done.

Resolution 03-2023 establishing water and sewer rates.

Water rates are set as follows: Minimum water rate: $17.75 per month for residential and commercial usage.

An additional rate of $4.00 per thousand (1,000) gallons of water will be assessed each month.

Surcharge: A Water System Improvement Surcharge of $7.60 will be added to each property that has access to city water. Current Surcharges of $6.31 and $3.26 still apply.

Bulk Water Rates: A bulk water rate $7.00

Sewer Rates: Minimum sewer rate: $16.90 per month for residential and commercial usage. An additional rate of $4.00 per thousand (1,000) gallons of waste water will be assessed each month.

Resolution 04-2023 is a resolution establishing water, sewer, and irrigation tap fees. A tapping fee of $1,500, plus parts required, will be charged for each water, sewer or irrigation

The first reading of Ordinance 01-2023 was approved by the commission. It supplements the budget to meet the obligations of the town and shows the money the town will use for the new water and sewer projects. It doesn't change the budget, but enters the water and sewer into the budget.

Butte County Deputy Jason March gave the Sheriff's report with records pertinent to Newell. During January, 28 records were exclusive to Newell, ranging from animal complaints to crimes against a person or property.

The plans for demolition of 102 Fisk St. were tabled since the bid was rejected and the commission decided to do more research.

Commissioner Lori Olson said that she would take care of the property at Ash Street. She added that she felt there were properties that seemed to singled out.

"If we do one, we should do everyone," she said. "We need to be consistent."

Mayor Wetz pointed out that the properties that were being "targeted" were the ones that that had gotten complaints.

Several members of the audience added that it was important to get involved in helping others in the community. It's important that everyone begin to reach out and help a neighbor. One member of the audience vocalized her thoughts about the rhetoric of the town's people discouraging new businesses. Don't wish failure on anyone, she added.

about their annual Runnings Bake Sale in November and participating for the first time by donating a large "baking basket" to the Festival of Trees silent auction in December.

New auxiliary member Amber Wich shared some prayer cards the group created to give to spouses and family members of firefighters so that when they are called out, the spouses can immediately pray for their family members.

Fire Chief Stan Lewis reiterated the importance of the new fire hall.

"From meeting in a closet-sized cold room to this new hall has been really important," said Lewis. "In my 23 years here, we have grown a lot, not just in members but in many ways." Lewis shared about the educational experiences the department had over the past year, including the annual fire school held at the Nisland Fairgrounds each summer, to learning more about situations that can cause cancer and what the department is doing to prevent that.

"We have increased our new equipment and are working on getting even more," the chief said. "He thanked Courtney Rans for her part in the Festival of Trees and for decorating a tree and being involved. Others on that committee included her husband Jeremy Butcher as well as Colleen Brunner.

"Our share of what was raised was right around $5900.00," said Lewis. "That's a big help. Lewis also thanked Fred Wells for his part in dealing with bureacrasm and the difficulties of applying for grants that help to provided needed tools, supplies and apparatus for the department.

"As a group, we are a good bunch of firefighters," said Lewis. He recognized the newest member of the team, Stephanie Simmons, who is in the midst of getting her Firefighter I and II certification.

'We've grown and changed," said Lewis. "But there's always room for more." Lewis wrapped up the meeting by handing out the traditional rose to auxiliary members and to female firefighters Simmonds and Brunner. He also gave roses to the firefighters to take home to their spouses.

We went to Bible study at Lester and Sharon Longwood's last Sunday night with John and Corinne Erickson, Susan and Vince Gunn, Dawn and Duane Harris, and Jim and Lucy Anderson studying "Fasting with God" by Tammy Hotsenpiller about the names of God.

Monday was Presidents' Day so there was no school or mail, but it was a nice, warm day.

The weather was starting to get bad on Tuesday, so Casey and Missy left for the state wrestling tournament in Rapid City so they could get the wrestlers that qualified for state, Grey Gilbert, Lincoln Wickstrom, Wyatt Head, and Kanyn Padden, down there before the weather got worse. It was only 13 degrees and the tournament didn't start until Thursday, but they wanted to make sure they got down there while they could still travel. There was no school in Harding County that day because of the nasty weather. Taz fed the cows again that afternoon and brought the sheep into the lot across the creek.

Wednesday was Ash Wednesday and Slim Buttes Lutheran planned to have a potluck supper and communion service that evening but it was canceled because of the weather. The temperature was 13 below zero and school was canceled again.

The temperature was 2 below zero on Thursday, but there wasn't any wind so the Harding County schools started two hours late, but that was the only school all week. The temperature dropped to 30 below zero during that night.

It was really chilly and windy again on Friday with a high of 4 degrees. I hadn't turned my chickens out since the weather got bad Tuesday through Friday and Friday morning I got a frozen egg. That night there was a low of 15 degrees below zero. Grey Gilbert took 5th at state and Casey and Missy came home from the tournament in Rapid City that evening. My Aunt Patsy Wilkinson and my Cousin Lois Eggebo flew down to Arizona on Friday to visit my Aunt Bessie (Wilkinson) Campbell and they plan to come home on Monday.

Grand River Roundup

The weather sure got better on Saturday when the temperature rose to 38 degrees. Veterinarian Lisa Henderson passed away Saturday, February 25, at the hospital in Hettinger at the young age of 53.

Lisa suffered a severe stroke on February 12th at home in Lodgepole. Memorial services are pending with Evanson Jensen Funeral Home in Hettinger. Lisa's family has our sympathy.

Sunday was a beautiful day with a temperature of 44 degrees and no wind. Pastor Henry announced that there will be a Lenton potluck supper on Wednesday evening at 6:00 with a worship service to follow to replace the Ash Wednesday service they had to cancel last week.

With the nasty weather we had this week, Reub and I were talking about the way our parents and grandparents survived during cold winters like this. They didn't have any of the wonderful things we have that we take for granted. They didn't on their own. Grandma Lydia and Grandpa Harvey Wilkinson ran the ranch store at Glendo until they lost the ranch during the Great Depression when they moved to Grandma's homestead over on Big Nasty Creek. Grandpa Wilkinson passed away when their youngest child of 8 kids was only two years old. Grandma and her kids worked hard to get enough money to buy back the ranch and then they moved back to Glendo.

My mother had a heart attack when she was 24 years old and my little sister and I lived with our Grandma Wilkinson for almost a year when I was 4 years old and my sister Judy was 21/2 years old, while Dad took care of Mom at our house in Prairie

Grandma didn't have electricity, running water, or a bathroom in her house at Glendo. All she had was a well up on the hill behind the house where she got water in the water bucket that we drank out of in the house and used that water to wash our hands, wash dishes, and wash clothes after the water was heated on the cook stove in the kitchen using cow chips, wood and lignite coal. Grandma washed clothes with a washboard, rinsed them in water and ran them through a wringer before hanging them on the clothesline, no matter what the temperature was outside.

The bathroom was an outhouse up on the hill and if you needed to go to the bathroom at night, she kept what we called a "thunder bucket" in the lean-to attached to the kitchen that you could use to go to the bathroom when it was dark outside. Grandma baked homemade bread and would feed Judy and me a treat using a slice of bread spread with lard and sprinkled with sugar. She also fed the dog a treat using a slice of bread with lard and salt that he just loved. Grandma didn't have much, but she taught us how to make do with what we had. Some Funny Proverbs:

*Junk is something you've kept for years and throw away three weeks before you need it. *Someone who thinks logically provides a nice contrast to the real world.

Newell Takes on Dupree

Colleen Brunner news@bellefourchebeacon.com

NEWELL - February 16 marked the Newell Lady Irrigators final home game of the season as they hosted the Dupree Tigers and tasted defeat. The girls scored just six points to the Tigers 10 in the first quarter. Those points came from Jaelyn Wendt with two and Kim Johnson with four on field goals.

In the second quarter they remained a bit on the down side as Dupree added 13 points while the Irrigators only managed seven more. This time Taylor Gaer was dominant with one just inside the arc, two at the charity stripe on a foul as she was shooting, and two more at the free throw line on a steal and attempt. She also added one more point on a technical shot to end the half at 23-13, Tigers. Rachel Erk got her name on the states with one of two at the line and Gaer added a trey. Macy Wendt hit inside the paint and Kim Johnson hit a field goal and went two of two on her next shot attempt at the free throw line. The third period ended with Newell down by 16,

The Lady Irrigators worked hard in the fourth, but Dupree was just as tough. Hitting treys and field goals. Although Newell scored 18 points in the period many of the younger girls played a part.

Jaelyn snagged a layup and a free throw and Gaer added a trey. Macey Wendt hit twice from inside the arc. Braylee Freytag hit for three and then went to the line for two of two. Hailey McCann finished things out with two points at the charity stripe for the Irrigators. The final was 57-38.

Girls Basketball Takes on Topa

NEWELL - Newell girls took on Tio Spaye Topa Thunderhawks on February 11 and dominated 69-47. Newell jumped out to lead with a layup by Jaelyn Wendt in the beginning seconds of the first period. Kim Johnson and Taylor Gaer added two more each before the period was halfway gone. Gear again hit for two and Macy Wendt added from inside the pain. Older sister Jaelyn came inside again for six more points before the buzzer sounded to end the quarter with the Irrigators up

Johnson went to the line for two of two right after the second period began. Wendt again came inside and Racher Erk dumped in a two-pointer. Gaer againt tossed in a field goal. Macy hit for two and Jaelyn had 50 percent at the line. Hailey

McCann added a field goal and turned it into three points with the free throw after putting Newell up 36-17 at the half.

Jaelyn was on fire with four more points right after the half. Gaer added two and Macy also hit a field goal. Kendra Johnson added two points and big sis Kim added two more. Bethany Mahaffy came in to get her name in the states with a field goal and the hometown girls were up 53-32 at the end of Again Johnson went two for two at the charity stripe, while Rachel Stranberg also got her points on the board with two field goals. McCann went 100 percent at the line and Kendra hit for two. Bethany again nailed a field goal to put Newell up 60-47 at the final buzzer.

Newell Girls Basketballl

End of the Road for Lady Irrigators

Colleen Brunner news@bellefourchebeacon.com

NEWELL - In a game postponed by weather, and re-located to Newell from Timber Lake, the Newell girls met the end of the road in the Region 8B girls basketball tournament on Friday, February 24. It was also the end of the road for Head Coach Scott Wince for his girls' basketball coaching career as he will retire from both coaching and teaching at the end of the school year. So, it was a bittersweet time for the team and the

with a bit of fire as Jaelyn Wendt headed right to the bucket against the Lemmon Cowgirls. But the Cowgirls were determined and tossed in a trey in the first few minutes. Macey Wendt hit for two points for Newell and then came back for the next bucket as well, keep the Irrigators close. Hailey McCann went one of two at the line to end the first period with Newell down by just one point, from Lemmon, putting Newell on top for the first time since

But, it didn't take long for Lemmon to respond with a field goal and a point after to tie it at nine apiece. The game tied up again at 11 and 13 as the lead went back and forth Lemmon's Allie Kohn, leader of the pack, dumped in a three-pointer and Karly Riley also nailed a field goal. Although Macey Wendt came back with one of her own, Newell went into the half-time break, down 18-15. Taylor Gaer scored for the first time in the third period with one from three-point land, and Jaelyn snagged another field goal to tie it up again at 20. The Cowgirls went on a scoring rampage, allowing the Irrigators no points while they scored 10 points. Jaelyn came back with two of two at the charity stripe. Again, Lemmon scored three field goals and a three-pointer. 2:49 was left in the third period. Five more points for the visitors before Kim Johnson hit a field goal followed by Rachel Erk just inside the arc for two. Macey hit twice in the period on field goals, but the Irrigators were down by 17 at the end of three, 47-30.

The girls just seemed to lose their drive coming out in the fourth period while Lemmon just poured on the steam. Erk went one of two at the charity stripe and Jaelyn hit again inside the paint. Rachel Stranberg scored her first points in the game on a field goal. With a little over a minute left in the game Wince subbed the younger girls, as did Lemmon to finish out the game. Hailey McCann added another field goal before time ran out on the game and the season. Q: N-7 15 30 37. L-8 18 47 52. Erk 1 0 0/0 2, McCann 2 0 0/4 5, Stranberg 1 0 1/2 3, J. 2023 Newell High School Senior Profiles Editor's Note: The Irrigator continues our series profiling the Class of 2023. This profile by Krystal Tesche.

A senior at Newell school, Sophia Johnston is the daughter of Nicole Gordon and Tim Johnston. Living with her grandparents, Rod and Velva Rezlaff, Sophia has six siblings: Dylan, Elexia, Presleigh, Zain, Dakota and Harley. Her mother and grandmother have been the greatest influences in her life, teaching her how to be an independent woman and always pushing her to do her best. And do her best she did.

Grandma and mom would be proud of how involved she has been with the sports curriculum at NHS, including basketball, track, and field, and rounding out her sports success playing volleyball all four years of high school.

Academically Sophia enjoyed the teaching staff at NHS, stating that she loved the hands-on learning experience of each class along with the individuality of the teaching styles from all teachers. They really cater to students' needs and likes in a way that spoke to Sophia. The Pierre trip, where seniors attend the state legislature and rub shoulders with those involved in setting laws in the state of South Dakota, is a prime example of this. Sophia got the opportunity to meet the governor, and along with her peers, she learned a great deal about how the government inside our great state works.

As Sophia's high school days dwindle, she said that what has stuck with her the most is that she realized that there is always someone to listen. There is always a friend or teacher that is willing to help in any way that they can. She enjoys being that person with her friends, be it going shopping or just hanging

Sophia will be attending Western Dakota Tech in the fall to become a Licensed Practical Nurse and join the workforce for around three years before furthering her education and becoming a traveling nurse. As sleeping a lot is also a huge hobby of Sophia's, it sounds like her dreams and ambitions will be taking a lot of that away so hopefully she gets it in now.

Black Hills Honey Farm has been beekeeping and manufacturing natural products "From BLACK HILLS The Hive" since 2001. Black Hills Honey Farm's apiculture standards are developed with the primary focus on the health of honey bees and the sustainability of beekeeping.

> From Farm to ForkWe seek to define the best practices for natural beekeeping with these priorities as guides, and with a secondary focus on the agricultural products of apicultural products of apiculture (honey, pollen, and propolis).

> The guiding principle at Black Hills Honey Farm is that quality is built into our natural products, and not just tested into a finished product. Therefore, the assurance is that the product not only meets the final specifications, but that it has been made by the same procedures under the same conditions each and every time it is made.

> Black Hills Honey Farm specializes in producing raw, varietal honey, and each varietal honey is as unique as its floral source. Black Hills Honey Farm harvests this distinction and quality, and hand bottles in glass jars to preserve its purity and taste, at the time of extraction.

> The strategy behind Black Hills Honey Farm wax processing is to limit the source of reusable beeswax. We only use wax removed from the upper half of the honey cell during extraction. Once the honey is removed from these cells, the bees have a clean new foundation. Clean foundations help control bee diseases naturally.

> > Black Hills Honey Farm is a fully integrated Beekeeping operation!
